WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—The Senate Committee which is investigating German propaganda past and present, in the United States, ordered into the records of the proceedings this afternoon the so-called "Palm Beach telegrams" of William Randolph Hearst, publisher of The New York American and nine other morning and afternoon newspapers in various parts of the United States.

The documents were placed in evidence by Major Humes of the Army Intelligence Service. A man, said to be a confidential representative of Mr. Hearst, was present in the committee room when the telegrams were ordered received in evidence by Senator Overman, the Chairman.

The messages are twenty-six in number, and all of them except six, it was stated, were either written, dictated, or inspired by Mr. Hearst. The exceptions were two telegrams from S. S. Carvalho, formerly a high official of the Hearst publications; two from Caleb van Hamm, the managing editor of The New York American; one from the editor of the Vossische Zeitung in Berlin, and the sixth from George Sylvester Viereck, the pro-German propagandist, in which Viereck referred to the Zimmermann note to Mexico as being a fake.

Period of Hearst Messages.

All of the telegrams were written during the weeks immediately preceding this country's entrance into the war. Mr. Hearst was at Palm Beach at the time, the period covered by the messages being from Feb. 22 to March 4, inclusive, of 1917. March 4 was nineteen days after Secretary Lansing handed Bernstorff his passports, and one month, lacking two days, before Congress declared war on Germany. Bernstorff received his passports Feb. 3 and war was declared April 6.

The Hearst messages refer to all sorts of details regarding the policies and make-up of his papers, from the decoration of the outside and inside pages with American flags, to instructions regarding the sentiments to be expressed editorially in the various papers owned by Mr. Hearst. A McKay cartoon which showed America and Germany shaking fists at each other, while Japan stood in the background ready to stab America in the back, the exhibits show, was inspired by Mr. Hearst.

In one of the last of the messages, addressed to Mr. Carvalho, Mr. Hearst referred to the Zimmermann note to Mexico as being in "all probability absolute fake and forgery." Attorney General Gregory is denounced as "a spy fancier and plot conceiver," while Colonel House, the President's adviser and close friend, is described as a man who "has been a corporation lobbyist all his life." He also referred to Postmaster General Burleson and Attorney General Gregory as being "so crooked" that one of them could lie on top of the Woolworth Building and the other on the floor and look down and up the winding stairs into each other's eyes.

Another of the documents was a cablegram from Mr. Hearst to William Bayard Hale, then his Berlin correspondent. This cablegram, which was dated Feb. 24, 1917—three weeks subsequent to the severance of diplomatic relations—was, in the opinion of the Government investigators, intended for publication in Germany.

Thought Majority Opposed War.

In this message Mr. Hearst said that "Americans from childhood have been taught to regard both Germany and France as their proven friends," and that it was his firm opinion that "the vast majority of the people of the United States" did not wish to go to war against Germany. He coupled the name of Frederick the Great with that of Washington, referring to them as "two of the ablest, and wisest, and most farseeing statesmen that any nations have possessed in the history of the world."

This message is believed to have been an answer to the one which Mr. Hearst received from the Vossische Zeitung, dated Feb. 22, asking for the opinions of the German rupture in "leading American circles." The Hearst cable to Hale was held up, however, and on Feb. 26 J. Willicombe, Mr. Hearst's secretary, telegraphed instructions from Palm Beach to the New York office to "make strenuous efforts to kill the long cable to Hale, &c."

The long message to Mr. Carvalho of March 2, 1917, in which Colonel House, Postmaster General Burleson, and Attorney General Gregory were denounced, was signed "Doctor," which, it was stated, was a code signature sometimes used by Mr. Hearst.

In another telegram to Mr. Carvalho Mr. Hearst, under date of March 3, 1917, referred to the use of American flags reproduced in colors as embellishments for his newspapers. He instructed that the big flags be removed from the first page and the little ones from the inside pages, "reserving those," he added, "for special occasions of a warlike or patriotic kind." He observed that, in his opinion, the use of flags had proved useful in "giving us a very American character and probably helping to sell papers, &c."

Cautions Sent to Publisher.

The messages from Mr. Carvalho and Mr. Van Hamm to Mr. Hearst show that these two members of his executive staffs tried to curb him, both of them urging caution, Mr. Van Hamm in particular begging him to check the Hale

2,800 Americans Set Free; Rest to Quit Prisons Soon

BERLIN, Dec. 9. (Associated Press.)—Twenty-six hundred American prisoners of war interned at Camp Rastatt left there yesterday and today for Switzerland. Two hundred other Americans who have been scattered in various camps in Germany are leaving Germany by way of Holland and Denmark. It is expected that the last of the Americans will be out of German camps by the middle of this week.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—Five hundred Americans, Englishmen, and others, a majority of the party being members of crews from the ships captured by the German commerce raiders Möwe and Wolf, have arrived at Aarhus, a seaport of Denmark, from Germany, according to a Copenhagen dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company.

MARSHALL HEADS CABINET SESSION

SEEN AS ACT OF COURTESY

In a Statement Mr. Marshall Explains He Is Not Undertaking Any Official Duty or Function.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—For the first time in the history of the nation a Vice President of the United States, Thomas R. Marshall of Indiana, presided today over a meeting of the Cabinet during the temporary absence of the President from the capital.

Mr. Marshall presided at the usual Tuesday meeting of the Cabinet at the request of President Wilson. But the Vice President made it very plain, in a statement which he read to the Cabinet members and which was made public at the White House, that he was not acting as President, and that he was not exercising any official duty or function, but only presiding over the Cabinet session in an informal and personal way.

Mr. Marshall will preside at the other Tuesday sessions of the Cabinet each week during the absence of the President. It developed in connection with the meeting of the Vice President with the Cabinet that the President had asked Mr. Marshall to do so before the President left Washington. The day's developments would seem to indicate that there was a general understanding all around between the President, the Vice President, and the Cabinet members.

The construction placed upon the matter is that the action of the President in asking the Vice President to preside over the Cabinet meetings was an act of courtesy. The Vice President is next in line to succession to the Presidency, and takes precedence next after the President in official functions in Washington. The Vice President had planned to make a journey to the Pacific Coast, but at the request of the President is remaining in Washington while Mr. Wilson is abroad. While it is considered that the action of the President in asking Mr. Marshall to preside was an act of courtesy, at the same time it was apparent that the presence of the Vice President at the Cabinet table would put him into rather intimate touch with the inner affairs of the Cabinet circle and enable him in any unexpected emergency to be ready to take charge of the affairs of state whenever required under the provisions of the Constitution.

Gentlemen: In assuming the Chair and presiding over what is known as a meeting of the Cabinet I deem it proper to make a brief statement so that my conduct may not be misunderstood nor misinterpreted. I am here and am acting in obedience to a request preferred by the President upon the eve of his departure and also at your request. But I am here informally and personally. I am not undertaking to exercise any official duty or function. I shall preside in an unofficial and informal way over your meetings out of deference to your desires and those of the President.

THOMAS R. MARSHALL.

10th December, 1918.

All the members of the Cabinet except Secretary Lansing were present. In the absence of Mr. Lansing the State Department was represented by Frank L. Polk, Acting Secretary of State.

Vice President Marshall was in a jolly mood when he left the White House after the Cabinet session, which began at 2:30 o'clock and lasted until 4 o'clock. When asked who, among the Cabinet members, had told the best story, Mr. Marshall chuckled and replied: "That would be hard for me to say, inasmuch as I told several stories myself."

When some one referred to the discussion over the President's absence the Vice President told this story on himself:

"When I got tired of hearing the constitutional lawyers talking about it I wrote my friend, Abe Martin's constitutional lawyer friend, Newt Plum, out Indiana way, and asked him what he thought about the situation created by the departure of the President. Newt replied that in his opinion the President had quit the job and kept the salary, whereupon I decided that, under the circumstances, I did not want the place."

This was Mr. McAdoo's last Cabinet meeting. The new Secretary of the Treasury, Carter Glass of Virginia, will take over the portfolio next Monday and will attend next Tuesday's session of the Cabinet. Mr. McAdoo said, however, that he would hold on for a few weeks as Director General of Railroads, and was confident that the new Director General would be named by Jan. 1. Mr. McAdoo denied that he had resigned to take any other place. He said he would take a few months' vacation, and then would go to New York to enter the practice of law.

BROKE HINDENBURG LINE

SHIPS BRINGS 406 WOUNDED

Bronx Private, Who Lost Foot at Mt. Kimmel, Proud That 27th Was Known as 'O'Ryan's Roughnecks.'

The first of the wounded from the Twenty-seventh, Thirtieth, and Thirty-seventh Divisions, New York's own soldiers who fought under General O'Ryan and broke the Hindenburg line in Flanders, arrived in the harbor yesterday on board the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Britain, which had a total of 70 officers and 2,372 soldiers on board, among whom there were 406 wounded. The majority of the uninjured soldiers came from the various air construction camps in England and had not been to France. They received an enthusiastic welcome on the way up from Sandy Hook to the pier at the foot of West Twentieth Street.

There was one death on the voyage from sickness, that of Private H. T. Steele of Company A, 127th Field Artillery, whose home was at Corsicana, Texas. Some of the men were hopping about on crutches, while others had lost their arms, and there were several soldiers who had lost a leg or a foot in the fierce fighting they had been through in Flanders. There were only ten army nurses to look after the 406 wounded, but most of the soldiers were able to move around and take care of themselves.

The Empress of Britain encountered very rough weather, but was only twenty-four hours late when she arrived in Quarantine at 9:30 yesterday morning. The report had been circulated from the Transport office in Hoboken that there were a number of the old Twenty-seventh Division on board and there were thousands of enthusiastic citizens waiting from an early hour along the waterfront to give their soldier heroes a hearty welcome home.

The police boat Patrol went down the bay to meet the ship with Grover Whalen, the Mayor's Secretary, and Commissioner Rodman Wanamaker on board with a band and fifteen young women of the New York Police Reserves. The band on the Patrol played "Home Sweet Home" and all the popular airs to cheer the men, and succeeded.

Thousands Welcome Ship.

When the Empress of Britain passed the Battery at 11 o'clock it was black with thousands of persons who had hurriedly left their offices nearby to give the New York soldiers a welcome. The windows of the tall office buildings and the Custom House were occupied by groups of men and women clerks waving handkerchiefs to the men on the decks of the trooper. The sun was shining brightly and the blood ran quicker through the veins of the wounded soldiers as they looked at the shore close by and realized that they were home again.

On the C deck, where the wounded were quartered, it was difficult to pass because the patients, except a few who could not leave their cots, were all up and standing in groups, anxiously awaiting news of their families and friends. Their anxiety was relieved when the senior surgeon informed them that they would be sent first to the General Debarkation Hospital at Ellis Island, and a few days later transferred to the hospital nearest to the place where they had enlisted for the war. The soldiers did not wish to talk about their own individual exploits in the war, but were all proud to tell the part their division had played in Flanders and France.

Private W. J. Regan, Company L, of the 26th Infantry, in the 27th Division, whose home is at 2,381 Valentine Avenue, the Bronx, said:

Corporal A. R. Ropp of 537 Franklin Avenue, Brooklyn, who was with the 27th Engineers, said that on Oct. 17 his company was constructing a bridge at Le Catin when a big shell exploded and tore away his left leg as neatly as if it had been done by a big razor. He fell into the river, but was dragged out by his mates, the Corporal added, and when he came to in the hospital he realized that his work was done so far as the war was concerned. In his opinion, the fighting from July to October was the fiercest and the casualties were heavier than at any other period America was in the war.

Captain George A. Blair, who was a liaison officer of the Second Army Corps and wore four wound stripes on his sleeve, said yesterday that the people of New York should feel proud of the 27th Division, as its members had won their places at the front in the firing line with the best troops in the American Army.

"The 27th and the 30th Divisions," Captain Blair continued, "were together when we started on the big

COLOGNE, Dec. 7.—At midday yesterday, that is, Friday, Dec. 6, the first British cavalry patrols entered Cologne, and, riding to the swing bridge which has replaced the old bridge of boats, were the first British soldiers to reach the Rhine. This morning one sentry lad of the 18th Hussars was posted on the town side of the bridge and another on the other side opposite the village of Deutz, famous as far back as Roman times as the bridgehead of Cologne. Facing him on that side was a German sentry in uniform bearing arms, the last of the rearguard of the German Army.

I walked on the bridge this morning and, leaning over it, looked down on the waters of the Rhine, and even then could hardly believe we were there and had reached that goal which used to be spoken of as a grim jest in the dugouts near Ypres and on the Somme, when it seemed easier to get to Heaven than to this German river—and this was so to many thousands of Britishers three months ago. I went into Bapaume on the morning of its capture, and even then the idea that we should be on the Rhine today would have seemed a fantastic vision. But there this morning were the Hussars with their sentries keeping guard, and down below the bridges on the quayside some of the British men were cleaning their machine guns in the midst of a German crowd; and in the streets were some of their armored cars, at which the people of Cologne stared from tramcars and sidewalks.

The young Hussar pacing the bridge looked lonely among all those German civilians about him, looking at his kit and giving him sidelong glances as they passed. One of my friends spoke to him and asked him how he was getting on.

"The people are not unfriendly," he said. "They come up and speak to me in English now and then."

A German Cracks a Joke.

"What do they say?" he was asked; and for a moment he hesitated. Then he grinned and said:

"One German this morning came up to me and said, in well-spoken English, 'So you have wound up as the Watch on the Rhine?'"

It seems too good to be true; but I believe this young sentry, especially after meeting several young Germans, now waiters again after four years of war, who spoke English perfectly, having been in hotels in London and Liverpool, where they learned British songs and slang. At the Domhof Hotel, where I once stayed in times of peace, one of these young waiters had just come back to his old way of life again, and seemed pleased to meet English people, though they had come in an army of occupation. He had been wounded in the throat in the Champagne, but looked none the worse and was a fresh-colored fellow.

There in the Domhof Hotel I sat and was waited upon by Germans, who, until a few days ago, were in the uniform of their army, and who a few months or weeks ago had been fighting against us. It was difficult to believe that the man who handed me a table knife and waited upon me, with a starched shirt front, would have cut my throat if we had met somewhere, we will say, on the outskirts of Cambrai, but today throat-cutting and blood-letting seem to belong to the nightmare that has passed, and British and Germans pass each other in the streets, sit in the same rooms, go into the same shops without desiring each other's lives.

God alone knows what hatred still lurks in German hearts against us. In Cologne, far more than in Aix-la-Chapelle and other towns on our way, there seemed a sense of hostility to our presence, and today at least there was no hat-doffing in the street when British officers passed, and thousands of men, who obviously were German officers just out of uniform, looked stern and cold, but they behaved with dignity and sufficient courtesy, as they have been called upon to do in proclamations pasted on the walls and bearing the signatures of Ebert, Haase, Scheidemann, and other Majority Socialists now ruling in Germany.

These public notices, welcoming back the soldiers to their homes and asking them to co-operate in the good order and industry of the civil population, so that they might attain the peace for which they had been fighting, seemed to me dignified and worthy of respect. They uphold the democratic liberty of the new republic.

"The ban has been removed," says one proclamation. "Germany is free and ready to take her place as a free people in the society of nations."

All the German population is urged to refrain from rioting and destruction and BERLIN, Dec. 9, (via Copenhagen.)—An extraordinary solution of the mystery concerning the origin of last Friday's riots has created a great sensation here. Many people believed from the start that irresponsible hoaxers had been at work, but nobody suspected the Foreign Office.

State's Secretary Solf announces that he has already instigated a searching investigation, but that satisfies neither the Independent Socialists nor the Spartacides, who insist that Count Matuschka, von Rheinbaben, and Martin must pay with their lives for having launched last Friday's sanguinary encounters, causing, it now turns out, about 100 casualties.

The reactionary papers are pleading extenuating circumstances and urging that the trio acted in foolish but honest zealousness to help Ebert's Government and depose the Soldiers' and Workers' Council, the organization which these circles blame for all the evil in Germany, and incidentally to get the Spartacides in trouble.

Besides the three named, several other persons are suspected of having connived, chief among them the notorious Count Metternich, who till yesterday was in command of the Royal Castle. Yesterday his case was investigated by the Executive Committee of the Soldiers' and Workers' Council, but with his astounding glibness Metternich managed to avoid the worst. When it came to a vote as to his guilt nine members of the Executive Committee voted in his favor, eight against him, so he was given a chance to resign his command, which he did.

Had Room in Foreign Office.

Count Matuschka and Rheinbaben are typical Prussian Junkers. The former until a few months ago was employed by the Government in the occupied districts helping to Prussianize them. The latter, a nephew of the late State Secretary, held some office in the Press Department of the Foreign Office. Both of them occupied Room 25 in the Foreign Office, which was well known to many American journalists, for here the censors used to blue-pencil their telegrams.

Needless to say, neither Solf nor any other official of the Foreign Office had any connection with the plot, but the journalist Martin frequently visited the young aristocrats and was often seen with them in a certain club in Wilhelmstrasse, where young and old so-called diplomatists gather. It is hardly possible that they should have used the Foreign Office telephone for the arrangement of Friday night's demonstration for fear of being overheard. There is, however, evidence that Matuschka's residence served as headquarters for the conspiracy.

The police made a thorough search, finding much incriminating evidence against the three principal conspirators, two of whom have completely disappeared, and several minor culprits. Much evidence, too, was discovered in Martin's residence after his arrest yesterday. The principal data among it are hundreds of thousands of handbills, which evidently were intended for distribution after the plan of arresting the Executive Committee succeeded.

Handbills Defended Arrests.

The handbills read:

Comrades, citizens, women! Read this aloud. Parts of the Berlin garrison and front formations were compelled to arrest today the traitorous, incompetent, treacherous Executive Committee, as it endangers to the utmost the people's welfare. Within fourteen days we should have had hunger, famine, pestilence, and niggers in Berlin.

We all desire peace, liberty, fair bread. All this we can have if the

Vast German Financial Loot Has Been Recovered By Allies in Vaults of Various Brussels Banks

LONDON, Dec. 10. (British Wireless Service.)—French and British pickets under the direction of the Paymaster General of the French Army, and in the presence of German officers in civilian clothes, have been sent to the various banks of Brussels, notably the Comptoir National d'Escompte de Paris and the Crédit Lyonnais, in the last two days and have removed large numbers of chests which were placed there by the Germans about the middle of October.

These chests, says the Reuter correspondent at Brussels, contain strong boxes and securities taken from towns in Northern France, including Lille, Roubaix, Tourcoing, Valenciennes, St. Quentin, and Cambrai. Other cases placed by the enemy in the banks at Liége are said to contain securities to the value of thousands of millions of francs.

These valuables will be returned to the financial establishments from which they were abstracted, except in the case of towns where the banks have been destroyed, as, for example, St. Quentin and Cambrai. In such cases the securities will be deposited in Paris.

REPORT EX-KAISER ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

WRITING AN AUTOBIOGRAPHY

Former Ruler Summons International Law Experts for Discussion of His Position.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—William Hohenzollern, the former German Emperor, has attempted to commit suicide, following mental depression, according to the Leipsic Tageblatt, which is quoted in a Copenhagen dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company.

A member of the former Emperor's retinue who prevented him from carrying out his intention received a wound, it is said.

The ex-Kaiser has had several interviews at Amerongen with two German experts on international law, with whom he discussed his personal position, according to an Amsterdam dispatch to The Express. These experts arrived and left Amerongen in a rather mysterious manner.

It is understood, according to the dispatch, that Herr Hohensollern is writing his autobiography and a history of his reign. He will explain, it is said, his attitude before and during the war. The book, which will be long, is intended for publication, or, if its author is tried before an international tribunal, it may be read as a part of his defense.

The City Council at Spa has documentary evidence proving that a Dutch General went to Spa to meet the former Emperor before his flight into Holland, according to the Paris Matin. It would appear, therefore, that his reception and that of the Crown Prince and suite at the Dutch frontier was "a mere comedy," the newspaper says.

Ex-Ruler Discards Uniform.

AMERONGEN, Holland, Dec. 8, (Associated Press.) — The former German Emperor and his wife attended religious services in the Castle Hall this morning. The Bible reading was from the First Epistle of Peter, chapter v., sixth to eleventh verses, [exhorting humility.] The preacher was a missionary of the Moravian Brethren at Zeist, near Arnhem, named Weiss.

Since his formal abdication the ex-Kaiser has discarded his uniform and appears regularly in civilian clothes about his retreat here, as do the members of his suite. The entourage has been reduced in number to eighteen for himself and the former Empress.

The family life of the erstwhile royal pair appears to flow as evenly as that of any middle-aged couple who might be enjoying a quiet country holiday. Their rooms on the first floor of the castle command a wide view of the landscape. They dine with their host, Count von Bentinck, being often joined at the meal by the Count's brother, a noble residing in a neighboring castle, and spend much of their time together strolling through the castle grounds.

Yesterday Herr Hohenzollern went for a walk in the country while his wife explored the neighboring market town of Wageningen. Today he visited Zuylestein, a Bentinck family property, where he indulged in tree cutting for the sake of the exercise.

The quiet of the village here is occasionally startled by wild rumors of plots upon the former Emperor's life, but the "suspicious person found lurking about the castle" generally turns out to be a harmless newspaper man in search of copy. Another rumor, of which no confirmation can be had, is that Herr Hohenzollern has bought a villa in the neighborhood.

The entrance to the castle is still strictly guarded.

Essen Paper Puzzled Over the Truth About the War.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 8.—The interview given by the former German Crown Prince to The Associated Press recently was widely reprinted in the German press. The Berlin Kreus Zeitung gave it a first page position, and the Berlin Tageblatt, the Weser Zeitung, and the Rhenish Westphalian Gazette of Essen also reproduced it prominently.

Referring to the former Crown Prince's statements that Germany's position was hopeless after the Marne and that the General Staff lost its nerve, the Essen newspaper remarks that it is "impossible to tell what is true and what is false" regarding these assertions.

COBLENZ CORDIAL TO OUR TROOPS

OUR SENTRIES AT BRIDGES

Crossing of the River Set for Friday—Food Plentiful, Citizens Prosperous.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

COBLENZ, Dec. 9.—The vanguard of the American Army of Occupation has reached the Rhine and taken over the policing of the city of Coblenz. The main force is about twelve miles back and is expected here in two or three days, for on the 12th the bridgeheads must be occupied.

The first Americans to reach the Rhine were a battalion of the 39th Infantry, which in response to the request of the German command left Treves yesterday morning by special train, reaching Coblenz yesterday afternoon and at once relieving the disorganized and faction-torn local police.

The German Generals feared an uprising in Coblenz, but so far the capable American doughboys have preserved perfect order.

No one who took that trip up the Moselle Valley will ever forget it. We passed from mist-covered and ancient Treves up the beautiful valley until at Berncastel we began to strike the mountains. With towering hills on either side, we skirted the Moselle, winding between thousands of acres of vineyards perched on terraced sides of the giant slopes, through the 4,200-meter Kaiser Wilhelm Tunnel and came to yet higher hills and a more beautiful valley.

One could not but think of what wonderful machine-gun positions these hills would have made for the German fighters, and one almost wondered why the boche quit fighting when he did.

Good-Humored Reception.

I don't pretend to know its significance, but the reception of the Americans here was very different from that at Treves. There sullen silence greeted us everywhere. Here smiling delegations met us; pretty girls waved hands and handkerchiefs.

The river promenade was crowded with the curious, who were in remarkably good humor. Every one seems anxious to do what can be done for the Americans. One walks along the boardwalk here, which, if one did not look across the picturesque Rhine, one might imagine the Atlantic City promenade, and one rubs one's eyes to make one's self believe that this is a vanquished nation.

A German officer took me for a walk late in the afternoon. Thousands of well-dressed men and handsomely-gowned women thronged the boulevard along the Rhine, the crowd in front of the magnificent Coblenzerhof reminding one of a Fifth Avenue holiday parade. The shop windows were filled with luxuries of every description. I bought excellent cigars and Waldorf-Astoria cigarettes.

My German guide took me into the city's finest tea-room. Here was matched the tea-room in Sherry's any December afternoon. Silks and satins and furs were on all sides. The tea-room itself was ornate and luxurious in its appointments.

Last night the cafés were filled with merrymakers up to 11 o'clock, and the theatres were running full blast. The gayety was as if Germany had won and not lost the war.

The world knows Coblenz as one of the beautiful cities of Europe, and certainly the German defeat has dimmed none of its glory. Blooming prosperity is everywhere apparent, and if there is BREST, France, Dec. 10. (Associated Press.)—The steamship George Washington, carrying President Wilson and the American delegates to the Peace Congress at Paris, was reported by the naval wireless as passing the Azores at 1 o'clock this afternoon. All on board were well after the stormy weather through which the Presidential liner passed.

Preparations for receiving President Wilson here have now been completed. The city is fairly humming with expectancy. The progress of each step taken by the American visitors now is followed with eager interest. The first plan of sending an American dreadnought fleet seaward has been changed. According to the new plan, the fleet will go out early on Friday morning to meet the American party a short distance off the coast and accompany it to port. French warships also will take Foreign Minister Pichon, Minister of Marine Leygues, and André Tardieu, head of the General Commission for Franco-American War Questions, for the first greetings by an exchange of salutes. French officers arrived here today from Paris to make final arrangements with the local authorities for the President's landing.

Pershing to Go Aboard Liner.

The George Washington draws too much water to enter the inner harbor, so the President's ship and the entire fleet of warships will anchor in the outer harbor about a mile off shore. An American party, consisting of General Pershing, General Bliss, Admiral William S. Benson, Admiral Henry B. Wilson, and Colonel House, will then board the liner and bring the President and Mrs. Wilson ashore aboard a naval tug. The landing will be made at Quay 3, where the French Ministers will extend a formal welcome to the President as he sets foot on French soil.

The George Washington is expected to arrive about noon on Friday. The landing of President Wilson is planned for 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and he is expected to arrive in Paris at 10 o'clock Saturday morning.

This schedule would leave less than an hour for ceremonies here, which necessarily will be restricted, although the Breton peasantry is gathering from miles around to give Mr. Wilson an enthusiastic greeting.

President Wilson will drive from the quay to the station, passing along the Cours Dajot, a splendid terrace overlooking the harbor. The populace and soldiers and sailors will be massed along the course, and if time permit there will be a brief address of welcome by the Mayor and a response by the President.

The Presidential train will proceed slowly, stopping for several hours during the night so as to arrive at the Dauphiny Station in Paris exactly at 10 o'clock Saturday morning.

Miss Margaret Wilson, daughter of President Wilson, arrived in Brest today to meet the Presidential party. She will accompany the party to Paris.

PARIS, Dec. 10.—Stephen Pichon, Foreign Minister; George Leygues, Minister of Marine; Captain André Tardieu, head of the Franco-American General Commission; Armand E. Gauthier, former Minister of Marine; General John J. Pershing, Colonel E. M. House, and a number of Americans associated in the work of the American Peace Commission will leave Paris on Thursday night at 10 o'clock for Brest to meet President Wilson.

Mr. Wilson's ship, the George Washington, will enter the roads at Brest early in the afternoon, escorted by American and allied warships. The welcoming party will go on board at once.

The President will arrive here at 10 o'clock and will be met by President Poincaré, Premier Clemenceau, and a large official delegation. The President will be taken to the Elysée Palace, where luncheon will be served. On Monday afternoon Mr. Wilson will be the guest at a solemn reception at the Hotal de Ville.

During the ensuing days President Wilson will take a long trip through the devastated districts and cities of Eastern France.

There seems to be no change in the plan to begin the Peace Conference on Dec. 17.

WILSON SEES MIMIC SEA FIGHT

Destroyer Gives a Thrilling Demonstration of Attack on U-Boat.

ON BOARD U. S. S. GEORGE W... INGTON, Dec. 9, (By Wireless to The Associated Press.)—President Wilson stood on the bridge of the George Washington this afternoon and saw a United States destroyer stage a thrilling demonstration of the work of repulsing a submarine attack.

A touch of realism was given by the drill of the men on board the liner and the convoying ships. The great liner was gliding through the tropical waters like a chip on a duckpond when bugles and alarm bells called the men to battle stations. President Wilson was taken to the bridge by Captain McCauley so that he might get a better view of the demonstration.

A destroyer which had been lagging far astern suddenly leaped forward, her funnels vomiting smoke and white spray dashing from her bow as she tore through the water at a clip of thirty knots. As the destroyer came abeam of the liner depth bombs were dropped and great geysers were thrown high into the air as the warship zigzagged its way through the waters beneath which was supposed to lurk the enemy submarine. Each explosion was distinctly felt on board the George Washington. The concussions sounded like heavy blows being struck against the side of the vessel. President Wilson was most interested in the demonstration and asked questions about it, going into the most minute detail.

The George Washington will pass into the Azores tomorrow morning and will turn northward on the last leg of the voyage. There will be no stop at the Azores.

NOT TO VISIT GERMANY.

President Quoted as Rejecting Ebert Invitation in Advance.

PARIS, Dec. 10.—According to a wireless dispatch from the U. S. S. George Washington, says Marcel Hutin in The Echo de Paris, President Wilson has been informed that Premier Ebert and Foreign Secretary Haase of the Berlin Government and Premier Eisner of Bavaria were about to make an effort to induce him to visit Germany. The President is quoted as having made this reply:

"Only by long years of repentance can Germany atone for her crimes and show sincerity. No true American could think of visiting Germany unless forced to do so by strictly official obligations. That is to say, I decline in advance to consider any suggestions of the kind."

PEACE FORCES THRONG PARIS.

Various Nations to be Represented by from 3,000 to 5,000 Men.

PARIS, Dec. 8.—Every train arriving at Paris these days brings in large numbers of officials attached to the various delegations to the Peace Conference. All the larger allied nations are continuously sending parts of their working personnel, and by the time the delegates gather the number of officials of all nationalities will number between 3,000 and 5,000. Each one will have some special work to do. Many of them are already busy.

The French delegates will have all their assistants near at hand, for the large staffs of the Admiralty and War and Foreign Ministries will be constantly available. The American office force will be large. Great Britain will have a large number of experts and assistants in Paris and, in addition, staffs in the London Governmental offices will be available for work which is not particularly urgent. Moreover, there will undoubtedly be in Paris representatives of Great Britain's dominions and colonies, with their respective staffs. Great Britain will also have in Paris experts of various sorts, including men who have made a life study of such subjects as the navy, colonies, the Far East, and the Near East.

The United States, because of its remoteness, will be obliged to have probably the largest staff, and for this reason the American authorities have been compelled to take over larger accommodations than any other delegation. Italy will also have a considerable working force here, but the delegates, as in the case of Great Britain, will be able to depend on much of their work being done in their own country.

Each European nation's delegates will have at their disposal their own private telegraph and telephone wires with which they may communicate with their respective Governments. So many hotels have been taken over by the peace delegates and the remainder of the hostelries are so crowded that it is impossible for soldiers to find accommodations in the city.

DEMAND TRIAL OF KAISER.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—A national movement in favor of the trial of William Hohenzollern, "his Chancellor, the General Staff of the German Army, the heads of the German Navy, the Junkers of the Empire and the Krupps," among others, for "criminal responsibility for the war," was launched at the Army and Navy Club in Washington tonight, when the Sons of the Revolution of the District of Columbia adopted resolutions urging the Peace Conference at Versailles to provide for the creation of an international court of sufficient jurisdiction to try the alleged offenders for their crimes.

DEMAND FULL COST OF WAR.

Patriotic Societies Submit Peace Terms Through Senator Lodge.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Payment by the Central Powers of the full cost of the war, including reparation and indemnity for all damages and deaths; the former colonies not to be returned, control of raw materials by the Allies and disarmament of Germany, with exclusion from any League of Nations until the discharge of all her obligations, are among the items in peace terms laid before the Senate by Senator Lodge for the National Committee of Patriotic Societies.

"Having kept faith with their millions of dead by giving unstintingly of men, money, and material, the allied nations must now see to it that that faith is not lost or weakened by sentimentality at the peace table," says the statement, which is signed by Edward Harding, Executive Chairman of the committee. "It is the solemn duty of each of us to do his utmost in word and deed in order that the volume of public opinion may be distinctly heard at Versailles, so that those things shall be done which justice demands.

"The instances in history where nations have lost at the peace conference all that they had gained on the battlefield must not be repeated today. The millions of brave men and women who have suffered untold sacrifices in this war fought not only for honor and glory, but for tangible results. We who have lived through it all would be traitors to our trust did we not make certain, through the power of our enlightened public opinion, that our men have not died in vain.

"Seeking for an irreducible minimum of terms as the basis for the discussion of the peace settlement, the National Committee of Patriotic Societies has collected the most notable speeches of the leaders of the Allies on the purposes for which the civilized world has been fighting. These utterances, together with a residue, of the terms proposed last June by Count Roon of Prussia, which provided for annexation of Belgium and Northern France, cession of the British Navy and payment to Germany of an indemnity of $45,000,000,000, are being published by the committee for use by the delegates at the Versailles conference. The document, which includes the suggested terms for a 'dictated peace' will be given wide circulation both here and abroad."

GERMANS STIRRED BY WILSON TRIP

SAY HIS INFLUENCE WANES

Fearful That Split in Old Empire Will Cripple World Trade Plans.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Dec. 10.—The German press is once again full of comment on President Wilson, his principles, his journey to Europe, and his probable influence on the peace conditions.

It is evident that Mr. Wilson, at one time slandered and maligned as a hypocritical peace President, is now looked upon as a peace apostle and the one person from whom the Germans expect tolerance. His fourteen points are turned inside out and interpreted as meaning anything and everything.

Two papers take up Wilson on the question of the colonies, alleging that Point 5, [declaring that the interests of the populations of colonies must have weight in adjusting questions of sovereignty] gives Germany the right to keep her colonies. The Cologne Volkszeitung says it learns from an authoritative source "that in spite of many difficulties which the Allies impose Wilson intends to insist that Germany shall have colonies in Africa."

The paper says that this statement agrees with Point 5 in the Jan. 8 address. It admits that the colonial allotment may be shifted around, but says that Germany's share will not necessarily be decreased. At the same time it warns against too much optimism, owing to "France's and England's Chauvinism."

Says Wilson Influence Lessens.

The Volkszeitung asserts:

"The weight that Wilson now throws into the scales is less than at the time when the fighting or the exchange of notes was still in progress. Wilson's influence lay in the decisive thrust of American bayonets on the Continent. Since that time conditions have changed."

The paper sets forth that America's help is no longer so important, and thus America's political importance has also decreased for the world, although economically she is still important. Like many other papers, it tries to prove that Wilson will not play a leading rôle at the Peace Conference, but it says that if the American delegates have an honest desire to do so they can put through many of Wilson's ideas for a just peace. It declares that the idea of a league of nations would be poisoned if the German nation were to be treated as an object of exploitation, and continues:

"If Germany had guilt for the war on her conscience, this demand would be a just atonement, but the whole German nation denies these accusations."

The paper proceeds to try to prove that the U-boat war was the only means of defense against the "hunger war" waged in defiance of international law.

The Rhenish Westphalian Gazette says that Germany cannot endure the economic loss of the colonies, although the German people do not appear to understand the vital necessity of colonial possessions.

All the German papers comment on Wilson's trip, saying that the President is coming to Europe in order to insist that his principles and program be carried out. The Lokal-Anzeiger, however, asserts that if Wilson wishes to put through his demands he must act energetically with all his personal force at the preliminary conference, "for these ideals have already been thrown in the dust by imposing the armistice conditions and continue to be thrown in the dust at the Spa negotiations."

The paper says that the world is not being kept informed about the negotiations at the Spa, where force comes before justice." Why is not a daily report published about the negotiations, it asks, and what about secret diplomacy?

"The world would learn," it proceeds, "that the ideals of the United States and its President, to which the Entente is committed, are trampled on before the French Conference. . . . They are only a scrap of paper for the Entente. This must be made clear to the world and especially to the American people by daily publication of the negotiations at the Spa."

This obviously is merely part of a campaign in which Germany is endeavoring to prove that the Americans have nothing to say about the peace proceedings, hoping thus to separate America and the Allies.

Walter Rathenau, in Vorwärts, addresses an open letter to Colonel House endeavoring to prove that the German people are not guilty of the war. Rathenau explains how he warned about the war and when it came he tried for peace. He says he warned Ludendorff at headquarters. After each paragraph he writes, "Why do I tell you that which you already know?"

Proceeding, he explains that Germany is ruined, having lost the oil and potash of Alsace and the iron ore of Lorraine and having little raw material left.

"Colonel, our acquaintance was short," he adds. "All the same you showed some confidence because I honestly stated the situation of the country, pointing out that only America could bring peace. My confidence in your friend, the President, is unshakable."

Rathenau says that Germany is menaced with destruction for ever and ends, "I greet you in confidence of your humanity."

The letter is part of insidious propaganda, and is an attempt to appeal to America to moderate terms.

Reventlow is also incensed that the proceedings at Spa are not published.

Attack France as Jingoistic.

Dec. 7.—Germans are continuing the campaign of attack on France, and wish to represent her as a belligerent, Chauvinist country, wanting to continue the war. Various articles in the press maintain that France has the final decision in the Armistice Commission, and that she does not want a League of Nations. Under these conditions America's representatives will have a hard job when they come to Europe, says a Rhenish paper.

Germans are also beginning to emphasize the danger of splitting up the Empire, and there is a wild cry for unity in the papers of all shades. "Urgency of Unity," "Save Germany's Unity," and "The Empire's Unity in Danger," are typical headlines now appearing daily, and at the same time there is an urgent plea for an immediate National Assembly for fear that the foundations of the Empire may be touched. The big industrialists who, The New York Times correspondent learns, are greatly depressed, are the first to cry out against a divided Germany.

"It is a great mistake to believe," says the Rhenish Westphalian Gazette, "that a separated Germany can attain the economic importance which it possessed in the time of the old régime. If Germany is split up, then there is no possibility of her partaking in the world market and world commerce.

"Reinstating a number of small States would throw Germany back to the situation at the time of the Thirty Years War. But then the people could live quietly and comfortably from the products of the land, while today's nation of 70,000,000 cannot live without industry and world commerce. . . . In Germany's unity lies the source of her political power and her economic capacities, and those trying to destroy the unity of the Empire not only would undermine the basis of the Empire, but their own existence."

School Question in Rhineland.

The paper greatly fears the proposed republic of the Rhine Provinces. It is asserted that the troops of occupation, especially the French, will work on anti-Prussian feeling.

THE TIMES correspondent, however, learns from a reliable Rhineland informant that the formation of the so-called Republic of the Rhineland and Westphalia is chiefly a question of religion. The Rhine Road is often called the Pope's Road to Rome. These provinces wish to make their own laws, retaining their religious schools.

The Conservatives, meantime, are waking up, and intend to put a hand on the wheel. They have formed a National People's Party. This group also contains the right wing of the National Liberals. Von Heydebrand acted as President at the meeting and drew up a resolution demanding an immediate National Assembly.

There is a strong monarchial movement in Germany, and Prince Henry's summons to remain true to the former Kaiser is only one of many signs. The ex-Crown Prince is much hated and despised in Germany for having given up the command of his army, unlike Hindenburg. According to a neutral friend of the ex-Crown Prince who has just visited him on the remote Island of Wieringen, the Prince is trying to make an appeal to America, and pretends to be a great admirer of the United States and Wilson. He has not relinquished all aspirations to the throne.

Germany continues daily to whine for food, but, according to reliable informants from various parts of Germany, the situation is, for the most part, grossly exaggerated. Germans themselves even admit that the reports are overdrawn.

"Otherwise we would get nothing from America," they say.

An official statement on food in the Vossische Zeitung carries little conviction. It mentions the Spanish sickness, early frost, &c., as partial causes and asserts that rations must be reduced by half.

THE TIMES correspondent learns that there is plenty of bread and potatoes, but, according to all evidence, there are practically no fats in the country and no dairy produce. There appears to be plenty of money among the workmen. They think nothing of paying 10 marks to go to a café or cinema for an evening. A delegate of the Soldiers' Council endeavoring to explain the reason why Germany has less food, did not hesitate to say that much food was taken from Rumania, (while Rumania was starving.)

DENY NEW NAVAL TERMS.

British Say Berlin Complaint Is Without Foundation.

LONDON, Dec. 10, (British Wireless Service.)—A new and false charge is contained in still another German protest that fresh naval terms, which go beyond the stipulations of the armistice, have been imposed by the Allies.

A Berlin telegram says that the Allies demand the return of all interned vessels and also those condemned by prize courts. What is described by the message as a completely new demand is the "surrender of all German war vessels, including submarines and river steamers, both finished and under construction, at present lying in German naval ports.

GERMANS STRIVING TO PLEASE ALLIES

CITY HOISTED BELGIAN FLAG

By CHARLES DAWBORN.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AIX-LA-CHAPELLE, Dec. 9.—One's foremost sensation on arriving in Germany is that of complete acceptance of the new situation by the inhabitants. They seem to feel that they have lost the war and must make the best of it. They are ready to meet their conquerors more than half way.

Their subserviency at times is embarrassing. An officer who was quartered on a German family tells me he was received with all the honors of the house. While he took a light supper, one woman of the household played continuously to him on a piano.

At the small fortified town of Juliers, some dozen miles from Aix-la-Chapelle, which I visited today, the municipality of its own accord hoisted the Belgian flag on the town hall.

This is typical of the attitude everywhere in this part of Germany. At Aix-la-Chapelle this morning, numbers of the inhabitants uncovered at the passage of the Belgian colors. During the whole German occupation of Belgium, no Belgian ever publicly honored the German flag. Again, the order of the Belgian commandant of Aix-la-Chapelle to show respect to Belgian officers by uncovering and descending from the pavement is being very widely followed, I have seen myself. So is this the order to be within doors at 7 o'clock.

Particularly on the left bank of the Rhine there is a disposition to affect a conciliating spirit with the object of minimizing the inconvenience of occupation. Lieut. Gen. Michel, commanding the chief troops in the Belgian zone of occupation in the German district stretching from Aix-la-Chapelle to Düsseldorf and from there to the Dutch frontier, is the most popular figure in the Belgian Army. He is known as the defender of Namur. I had the honor of an interview with him at headquarters this afternoon. He said the occupation by the Belgians of the left bank of the Rhine was conceived not in a spirit of revenge, though Belgium had suffered much, but in a spirit of justice, tolerance, and kindness, combined with strictness.

Referring to the order just issued, that civilians at Aix-la-Chapelle should salute the Belgian officers and leave the pavement free for them, and that they should be within doors at 7 o'clock at night, the General said it was almost an exact copy of the orders of the Germans during their early occupation of Belgium. It was right, therefore, that the same régime should apply in Germany. At the same time, General Michel said he would leave himself free to determine these matters according to circumstances.

"Caprice, I need hardly tell you," he added, "will play no part in my administration, which will be based on legality and the rules that have been adopted for the four zones."

COLOGNE, Dec. 7.—French and American troops officially entered Aix-la-Chapelle today and took over the occupation of that German city from the Belgians. Allied flags were flown in the Friedrich Wilhelm Platz, where the allied Generals assembled to take the salute of the troops.

French Deck Charlemagne's Tomb.

PARIS, Dec. 9.—The Franco-American forces which occupied Aix-la-Chapelle Saturday were commanded by General Degoutte. In addressing the troops General Degoutte recalled that Charlemagne had made Aix-la-Chapelle the capital of the borderland destined to stem the tide of Teutonic invasion. The tomb of Charlemagne was decorated with French flags.

General Degoutte declared that the former German Emperor was the fomenter of the war, and that he was now awaiting unavoidable punishment.

FRENCH WANT GERMAN SHIPS.

Echo de Paris Points to Depletion of Nation's Mercantile Fleet.

PARIS, Dec. 10.—First consideration should be given to France in the distribution of the German commercial fleet, the Echo de Paris contends. It comments on the state of the French merchant marine, the disparity between the French seizures of enemy shipping and those of the other Allies, and the inferiority of France as regards shipping construction, brought about by the military necessities of the Allies, which a large share in supplying was assumed by French industries.

The newspaper argues the necessity of placing among the peace conditions a stipulation for the delivery of a sufficient number of German steamers to permit France immediately to regain her normal traffic facilities.

The Echo de Paris recalls that Herr Ballin, the German shipping magnate, not long before his death, advanced the view that Germany should refuse to turn over her mercantile fleet in supplying the demands of the Allies, and that she preferably should work to reconstruct the mercantile fleets of the Entente.

This, the newspaper contends, should not be allowed, and there should be exacted the delivery of sufficient steamers to France to give her her rightful place in sea traffic.

ALL FOOD NEEDS BEING MET.

Allies Preparing to Turn Some Shipping to Normal Trade.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—A survey of the shipping and food situation as set forth in the conferences centring around Edward N. Hurley of the American Shipping Board and Herbert C. Hoover, the American Food Administrater, leads allied food and shipping heads to believe that there is available at present enough tonnage to handle present food needs. Conditions are such, it is believed, that it is not unreasonable to expect that some tonnage might soon be released to carry American exports other than food. Much tonnage has been released from carrying munitions and raw materials for munitions.

GERMAN PLOTTERS EXPOSED

National Convention is called at once, which we demand as a Christmas present for the young republic. The people's will is the supreme law.

The last sentence sounds strangely reminiscent of Wilhelm II., who once, to the great chagrin of all liberal-minded people, proclaimed publicly, "The King's will is the supreme law." If it were not for this last line, one might mistake the handbill for a genuine democratic product; but Martin's associations do not warrant the belief that he was serious in his democratic intentions. He has been associated with such men as Reventlow, though it may be doubted if any serious reactionary really had any connection with this absurd conspiracy.

No matter what were the ultimate intentions of Martin Matuschka, and Rheinbaben, the reactionary press's contention that they meant to aid Ebert's Government may be regarded as ridiculous. It has not yet been discovered who, in the guise of a "Captain Kessler," ordered the Franzer regiment to participate in the coup, but Matuschka is suspected of having played the part.

Watchword was "Redheart."

At the homes of all three a number of black arm-loops with a red heart embroidered thereon were discovered. Some minor culprits had a number of these arm-loops, which evidently were to distinguish the leaders of the new movement if the coup succeeded.

"Redheart" was the watchword given to the minor culprits with which to make themselves known to one another as being among the wise ones.

It has since developed that quite a number of other troop formations had been approached by the conspirators to take part in the coup, as, for instance, a mariners' battalion under Commander Hermann Graeber, who had been asked to send 200 or 300 men with rifles and thirty rounds of ammunition. Captain Schwarzenburg, formerly in command of these troops, was consulted, and disapproved of it. At another consultation of Graeber with a member of the Flying Corps, Echtmann, the latter gave the former the watchword, "Redheart," which would accredit him in certain circles. Echtmann had added to the plan of arresting the Executive Committee the ovation to Ebert, and requested Graeber and his men to take part in both.

As Echtmann refused, however, to tell who had authorized the plan, Graeber went to the Chancellor's palace, but found no one there who knew anything about it. Graeber had been told that Guard Pioneers were in the know, so he telephoned to them from the Chancellor's palace, giving the watchword "Redheart." But the Guard Pioneers would not talk over the telephone.

That was on Friday morning. Graeber sent a small unarmed detachment of mariners to participate in the demonstration to Ebert. It is supposed that many other troop formations were approached in a similar fashion by the "Redheart" conspiracy.

Students Raided at the Bristol.

BERLIN, Dec. 10, (via Copenhagen.)—A rumor which spread last night that Matuschka, Rheinbaben, and other conspirators had been arrested at the Hotel Bristol proved untrue. However, no fewer than a hundred persons were taken into custody in the hotel but were released after examination lasting nearly all night.

It seems that some five hundred students during the first few days of the revolution formed a battalion of their own for the preservation of law and order under the leadership of Dr. Sack, who was the only person held for further examination. Aided by a certain officer in the War Ministry, Sack secured 500 rifles with which to arm the students' guard, a suite of rooms in the Hotel Bristol serving as headquarters. Here, too, most of the rifles were discovered.

When the police invaded their suite of rooms, some young fellows, believing that "Karl" and his Red Guards had come after them, sought security under beds and in wardrobes, which behavior was all the more ridiculous as they afterward declared that their sole intention was the suppression of any counter-revolutionary action by the Spartacides. There still seems to be some reason for suspecting Sack of having concealed his ultimate intentions from the young followers, but the police are quite convinced that he had no connection with the Matuska camp.

Incidentally, young Prince Hohenlohe, who was stopping at the Bristol, was arrested, but was released immediately on proving himself innocent.

The only red flag displayed in all Potsdam is flying from the roof of Prince Friedrich Leopold's castle. Nearby, in Neubabelsberg, some Guard Cuirassiers had been quartered, awaiting with other guard regiments a festive entrance into Berlin today, which circumstance gave rise to an alarming rumor that Berlin was on the eve of a royalist invasion. However, the cuirassiers and other guard regiments now quartered near Nicklassee have the most loyal intentions toward the present Government, only they have not yet got used to the red flag.

For this reason they deputized an officer and several under officers to go to the Prince's palace, requesting that the black, white, and red be hoisted alongside the red flag. The Prince said he had no objection as long as the Potsdam Soldiers' Council was satisfied. The matter was easily arranged by telephone with that body, and now the tokens of revolution and despotism fly peacefully together on the Prince's palace.

Lieutenant von Hentig, however, who headed the delegation to the Prince's palace, was called before Colonel von Echardstein and summarily suspended from the service because he acted without the consent of the whole regiment.

The palaces of other royal Princes at Potsdam still lack any festive decorations of welcome to the troops, though the rest of the town is galore with bunting.

Relics of 1914 at Heligoland.

Some Heligolanders who have returned to the old island in the last few days, after spending nearly five years in exile near Hamburg, found their homes in the most fantastic conditions. Some houses had disappeared altogether and some had been decapitated, the piled brick in adjoining gardens revealing what had become of their top floors. The extraordinary change was due to the requirements of modern artillery.

In most cases, however, the Heligolanders found their homes exactly as they left them in that hurried half hour they were given to pack up, Aug. 1, 1914. There were remains of that night's rudely interrupted suppers still on tables, and coffee in half-emptied cups.

Under the door of one house the owner found a letter with a faded address which had come too late for its proper delivery. In another house the laundry of female Summer boarders was cleanly laid out on the beds, just as it had come from the wash that fatal night when its fair owners heedlessly fled aboard the steamer to Hamburg.

Chemnitz Reds Put to Flight by Uhlan Machine Gunfire

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 10.—At Chemnitz members of the Soldiers' and Workers' group recently attempted to disarm a Uhlan regiment. The soldiers resisted and fired upon them with machine guns, whereupon the soldiers and workers fled. Many of them were seized and beaten.

The Soldiers' and Workers' Council then ordered out an infantry detachment against the Uhlans, but the infantrymen were disarmed by the Uhlans.

MARTIN CALLED AN AMERICAN.

Plot Suspect Once Rebuked by Gerard—Scheidemann Fears Chaos.

BERLIN, Dec. 9, (Associated Press.)—Of the men denounced as leaders in the attempt to arrest the Executive Committee of the Soldiers' and Workmen's Council, Martin, who is known locally as an American, has been living in Berlin since the outbreak of the war, and is the founder of the League of Truth. Posing as an American, Martin on July 4, 1915, placed a wreath, with which was an American flag bordered in black, on the statue of Frederick the Great. James W. Gerard, the American Ambassador at the time, compelled the authorities to remove the wreath by threatening to remove it himself if his request was not complied with.

Later Martin was compelled to admit that he was a German subject. He allied himself with the German annexationists, and proved a constant source of embarrassment to the German Foreign Office, which tried to suppress him, but was blocked by his Pan German military protectors.

Van Rheinbaben, another of the leaders, is a cousin of Baron von Rheinbaben, who was connected with the Christiania bomb plot. Matuschka is a young officer who held a post in Lithuania until the revolution. Both were unsalaried volunteer workers for the Government.

A group of the Spartacus Party adherents, headed by Dr. Karl Liebknecht, made a demonstration last night before the Chancellor's Palace, now the headquarters of the Government. The crowd clamored for the appearance of Herr Barth, Secretary of the Independent Social Democratic Party and Secretary for Social Policy in the Ebert Ministry. He is a former member of the Spartacus group, of whom the remaining Spartacans are suspicious.

In answer to the clamor, Secretary Barth appeared at a window and addressed the crowd. He said that if he could meet Dr. Liebknecht in a public hall for a straight talk Liebknecht would afterward not have a single workman behind him. Barth asserted that he took his post in the Government at Liebknecht's insistence.

His speech was received with shouts of disapproval and demands that the building be stormed and the person of the Secretary seized. The crowd finally quieted down, and Dr. Liebknecht advised his followers to content themselves with showing their determination by crying, "Long live the social revolution!"

"I will not put up with these conditions another week. I will get out," declared Philipp Scheidemann, a member of the Government, in a speech today defending the Government and himself against the attacks of the Spartacus group. Scheidemann said that the Government had 90 per cent. of the German population behind it. "But nevertheless it is sitting on a powder keg."

"Socialization along the lines demanded by the incompetents," Scheidemann added, "would ruin industry and trade. If we remain longer in this revolutionary crisis, we are lost beyond hope of rescue, and we will not have a piece of bread. If the people do not come to their senses, they will be brought to their senses by the Americans."

COLOGNE CALMED BY BRITISH ENTRY

By PHILIP GIBBS.

base behavior, which, says the proclamation, "are also hated by enemy troops."

These appeals for good order follow days of rioting in Cologne, which began when sailors of the German fleet came into the city three weeks ago. They all arrived by train and marched out of the station bearing the red flag of the revolt. There they were met by a great crowd of civilians, who joined them in the procession around the cathedral square and helped them take possession of the Rathaus, or town hall, the Post Office, and other public buildings.

Part of the mob then went to the soldiers' clothing depot and pillaged it, throwing clothes out into the street, where they were stolen by another crowd outside. Some shops also were looted and some people killed in the riot. Gradually the Burgomaster of Cologne was able to restore order and resume his authority with the help of his Bürgerwehr, or Town Guard, and Cologne became normal when the sailors went their way. But three days ago disorder again broke out and there was pillaging of Jewish clothing stores by soldiers, who wanted civilian suits and said:

"If we are found in uniform by the English we shall be shot."

On this night of Dec. 3 some people were killed, and to prevent further disorder the Burgomaster desired the presence of British troops at the earliest moment. Since their arrival the city has been calm. Part of the trouble, I am told, had been due to young hooligans, who carry arms and have been out of hand since their fathers went away as soldiers. The civil authorities now are calling upon all parents to deprive them of these weapons.

There is no sign of this turbulence in Cologne today. In the great spaciousness of the cathedral, below its tall columns, the German people were at prayer, and outside in the streets, with their beautiful shops well-stocked as in times of peace, the people went about their business.

From inquiries I made, it seems to me that Cologne has suffered severely from food shortage, and I have seen figures showing that infant mortality has increased to very high figures since the beginning of the war, but here again, as in all German towns I visited, food is a question of money, and if the people could afford to pay the enormous prices they could live in luxury.

While the poor classes were closely rationed and had meagre fare, in the Domhof Hotel today there was a better luncheon than one could get in any restaurant in England. It is this inequality of suffering that has caused bitterness and revolt, and soldiers, returning penniless after the privations of war, find it hard to get enough to eat, so some of them told me tonight.

In Aix-la-Chapelle today there was a formal entry of French and American troops, and the Belgians handed over the Government of the town to the French General. The entry was very picturesque and impressive, and the French General, with the Belgian and American Generals, watched the march past of their troops through great crowds of German people, who saluted the colors.

HUNGER THE CAUSE OF COLOGNE RIOTS

COLOGNE, Dec. 7, (Associated Press.)—Order has been re-established in Cologne as the result of the arrival of an advance guard of British troops. There had been several days of the keenest anxiety in the city, caused by extensive riots and pillaging on the part of mobs of the lower classes, with attendant bloodshed when the turbulent element clashed with hastily organized guards of responsible citizens armed with rifles and machine guns.

The disorders began on Wednesday night after the withdrawal of the German troops from the city. They continued the next night in various quarters on a large scale. Much damage was done to property, and a large quantity of goods was stolen from the stores.

According to Burgomaster Adenauer, the rising was due to the inability of the poor to obtain food and clothing, owing to the scarcity of these necessities. He thought there was little reason to doubt, however, that the trouble was also due in part of the freshly inculcated Bolshevist idea among the populace that it was needless to work any longer. With the removal of the restraint exercised by the presence of the German troops, the overwrought nerves of the people seem to have given way, and they went out to take forcibly what they were unable to buy.

The regular police were unable to handle the situation, and 3,000 of the citizens were called and armed by the Burgomaster to maintain order. A fight between the rioters and this civic guard resulted in several of the rioters being killed. The Burgomaster, finding that the conditions continued to be grave, then applied to the armistice commission to hasten the allied occupation.

The troubles ceased with the appearance of the troops yesterday. Today a cordon of British forces was thrown out from the city along the Rhine.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 9.—British troops, according to a telegram from Cologne, have declined to make use of the public buildings there placed at their disposal. They have occupied private quarters.

VIENNA FACING COLD AND FAMINE

NEUTRAL ENVOYS' PLEA

By HAROLD WILLIAMS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERNE, Dec. 9.—Vienna, formerly one of the most brilliant capitals in Europe, is now a spectral city. From being the capital of a powerful monarchy it is reduced to the position of the capital f a small German-Austrian republic. It has lost its raison d'être, and practically possesses now far less political power than Munich. By the collapse of the empire Vienna is left stranded, yet it cannot change its fare, cannot adapt itself to a more humble rôle in a day.

The cosmopolitan population of this derelict capital numbers 2,300,000, while the total population of the new State of German Austria, including even the still disputed territories, is barely 8,000,000. Economically, German Austria simply cannot maintain Vienna in its present form. The capital drew its life from the big, complex economic system which is now rent asunder. German Austria has no coal to feed the Viennese industries, street railways, and lighting apparatus, nor has it nearly enough food to keep the Viennese population from starvation. Its food supplies are drawn largely from Hungary, and its coal from Bohemia, both of which countries are now in open or concealed conflict with German Austria.

Vienna is in a state of siege and is dying of starvation. Every day fresh reductions are made in the allowance of gas and electric light. Not only the theatres and motion picture houses, but the hospitals are closed because there is no coal to light or warm them. Shops close at 5 P. M., street car service is reduced, only a few trains are running, and the danger is very real that unless relief is forthcoming the trains will stop, and all factories will close within a fortnight or so.

As to the food shortage, it is only Petrograd and Moscow that can supply a parallel to the present wretched situation in Vienna. The population is too miserable to care about politics. There was no particular revolution in Vienna. The city was simply deserted by the monarchy, which betrayed it, and by the nationalities which suffered under the monarchy's corrupt rule. German Austria is not so much a State as a forsaken remnant of the Austro-Hungarian Monarchy—bewildered, isolated, not knowing where to turn.

Neutral Diplomats Trying to Aid.

VIENNA, Dec. 9, (Associated Press.)—The coal and food situation daily is growing worse, and the city undoubtedly is threatened with a coal and food famine such as is being experienced at no other point in the Empire. The authorities here feel that disorders are bound to follow and that there will be political unrest unless the Allies immediately provide food and troops, particularly Anglo-American troops.

The seriousness of the situation was indicated at a meeting of all the neutral Ministers and the Papal Nuncio, who, after Mayor Weisskerchner had explained the situation to them, informed their respective Governments and Pope Benedict.

The Ministers of Sweden and Switzerland were delegated to go to Prague in an endeavor to induce Dr. Karl Kramarz, Premier of Czechoslovakia, to aid the Viennese, especially with coal. The few Americans here already have been requested to use their influence to protect the families of prominent personages when they are arrested, it being feared that Bolshevist methods will prevail when the suffering of the people grows greater.

Circulars are being distributed among the poor and the workers by former soldiers from the front, who are said to have in their possession 100,000 rifles and many machine guns, and who declare that unless food arrives by Sunday they assume the right to go and find food where they can.

It is stated that the Government is divided on the question of inviting allied troops to come to Vienna in fear of certain of the Ministers, who are said to favor a union with Germany. This fact, it is said, may prevent a union, and aid the Czechs in pushing their claims for German-Austrian territory. Thus far the Government appears to have made no concessions desired by the Czechs, who are considered in a position to furnish coal and a limited amount of food.

WON'T SERVE WITH HEARST.

Johnson Calls Appointment to Welcome Soldiers an Insult.

In the absence from the city of Mayor Hylan, who went to Baltimore on Monday night with William R. Hearst to attend a session of the convention of the Atlantic Deeper Waterways Association, no comment was obtainable at the Mayor's office regarding his appointment of Mr. Hearst to serve on the committee to welcome home the returning troops. Some members of the committee appointed by the Mayor have refused to serve because of the Hearst appointment.

Robert Underwood Johnson sent a letter to the Mayor last night in which he declined to be a member of the committee. His letter follows:

Dear Sir: I have your letter of the 7th of December, by the hand of your secretary, Mr. Whalen, appointing me a member of the Committee of Welcome to homecoming troops. In ordinary circumstances I should esteem this appointment a great honor and should loyally respond to any demand of service it required, as I have done in many similar instances under former Mayors of the city. I am, however, obliged in self respect to decline the appointment.

My reason for doing this is that the honor of such an appointment is vitiated by the inclusion in your committee of William Randolph Hearst, whose sinister attitude from August, 1914, toward his country and toward the principles for which the Allies were fighting is a matter of public record; so conspicuous, indeed, as to make his appointment on such a committee an insult not only to our gallant soldiers for whom, under whatever auspices, America will have an overwhelming welcome, but to every self-respecting citizen of this country.

This welcome, moreover, should not be tainted by an endeavor to rehabilitate the public reputation of any man. I am, indeed, with due respect, very truly yours,

ROBERT UNDERWOOD JOHNSON.

Others who have declined to serve upon the committee appointed by the Mayor are William Fellowes Morgan, President of the Merchants' Association, and Arthur Curtisse James. A number have not yet accepted the Mayor's invitation to serve. These include Frank A. Vanderlip, Paul M. Warburg, Colonel William Boyce Thompson, Daniel Guggenheim, Frederic R. Coudert, George F. Baker, Jr., and William K. Vanderbilt, Jr. Elbert H. Gary said that any information as to his acceptance or declination of the invitation would have to come from the Mayor.

HEARST'S ORDERS BEFORE SENATORS

cablegrams, which he said were "so worded as to permit the interpretation" that the Hearst policies were dictated from Berlin.

"I fear," telegraphed Mr. Van Hamm, "we are drifting into a situation akin to the false McKinley one, only accentuated manyfold."

Mr. Carvalho, in a telegram of March 1, 1917, informed Mr. Hearst that Senator Swanson of Virginia had announced in the Senate that he was authorized by the President to state that the Zimmermann note to Mexico was textually correct. In face of this warning Mr. Hearst replied, under date of March 2, that he agreed with Francis, an editor of one of his papers, that the note as published was probably faked, and that it was a forgery.

There was nothing sensational about the introduction into evidence of the documents. The committee room in the Senate office building was comfortably filled, those present including many army officers. The papers were submitted by Major Humes immediately after Professor Albert Bushnell Hart of Harvard University left the witness stand.

Photostat copies of the originals were piled in front of Major Humes. Professor Hart had just concluded a statement which was a protest against the inclusion of his name in the Fuehr list of prominent men who, in the opinion of Fuehr, were friendly to Germany.

"Have you the Hearst documents?" Senator Overman asked Major Humes.

"Yes, Sir, here they are," replied the Major.

"Very well, we will receive them in evidence," said Senator Overman. "You need not read them. Just hand them to the Clerk fo inclusion in the official to the Clerk for inclusion in the official records."

Text of Hearst Messages.

The committee had read all of them at the executive session late yesterday, when it was voted to admit all of them into the record. The documents now in the record read as follows:

Condemned Espionage Bill.

Philip Francis, New York American, New York City:

There should be a vigorous attack on the Espionage bill. Note that Senator Cummins says: "the measure is the most stringent and drastic ever proposed to curb a free people in time of peace or war. The Government would have absolute power in wartime to suppress newspapers and prevent debate in Congress. It might even be held a criminal offense for two citizens to discuss with each other questions of military policy. Under such a law the agitation would never have taken place in England which led to the assumption of the Premiership by Lloyd George."

In other words, under such a law the defects in the management of public affairs could not be discussed, could not be presented to the public, and the people, unaware of the facts, would be unable to correct them.

The Democratic Party seems to forget that this is a Republic in which the people govern, and in which full information is essential to intelligent government.

In fact, this Democratic Congress seems to be about the most undemocratic institution in the United States. It has passed the literacy-test Immigration bill and is doing its best to suppress free speech and a free press. It would be a remarkable thing if the only hope of democracy in this country should lie in the Republican Party.

Rush. Feb. 24, 1917.

Shiber, New York American, New York City:

Please cable following Hale in Berlin. WILLICOMBE.

I firmly believe that the vast majority of the people of the United States are entirely undesirous of war with Germany. I believe also that the people of Germany are equally undesirous of war with the United States.

Under such circumstances, I cannot see why the century-old friendship of the United States and Germany cannot be maintained and perpetuated by the high-minded and humanitarian rulers and political leaders of our respective countries.

We in America have just celebrated the anniversary of Washington's Birthday, and this should remind us that the friendship of Germany and the United States was inaugurated by Washington and Frederick the Great, two of the ablest, and wisest, and most far-seeing statesmen that any nations have possessed in the history of the world.

May the statesmen of our respective countries today heed the advice and follow the footsteps of these two great leaders of men and builders of nations.

The course of my newspapers has been fair to Germany not because I am pro-German any more than I am pro-Ally. I am merely patriotically interested in the welfare of my own country and altruistically interested in the progress of the world.

I am sure the United States will value in the future the consistent friendship of Germany as it has valued it in the past, and I think that most Americans realize that Germany, like France, represents in Europe a political, social, and economic progress similar to our own.

Americans from childhood have been taught to regard both Germany and France as their proven friends. We therefore deeply deplore the war between these great nations which have contributed so much to the progress and civilization of the world, and we earnestly desire to employ the influences of our country not for the extension and protraction of the war, but for the promotion of a just and lasting peace.

Day Letter. Feb. 25, 1917.

F. W. Kellogg, Washington Bureau of New York American, Post Building, Washington, D. C.:

When I inscribed the watchword "An American Paper for the American People" over the titles of my newspapers I meant just what that motto said.

I will not supplicate England for news or for print paper or for permission to issue. I will not allow my papers to be edited in the smallest degree by any foreign power. I would shut down every publication I have first, and I don't intend to shut them down.

In fact, the more foreign powers endeavor to interfere in America's domestic matters and the more these foreign powers try to control our American institutions, particularly our free press, the more necessary it seems to me that American papers for the American people shall continue to be published.

I will just add the verses of "The Star-Spangled Banner" to my editorial mottoes and, like that free flag, continue to wave. HEARST.

Outlines for an Editorial.

DAY LETTER.

February 25, 1917.

Philip Francis, New York American, New York City:

Please make editorial advocating embargo for American along your own lines. Also kindly make one for Even-Journal amplifying and improving following suggestions:

America is not only being starved for the benefit of warring Europe, but it is being plundered of its wealth as well.

We are sending abroad genuine wealth, the wealth of our mines and our mills, the wealth of our farms and our factories, the natural resources which God has given us for our development. We are receiving in return counters, media of exchange, which may never be redeemed. Of what use are the I O U's of a bankrupt?

Uncle Sam is being gold-bricked. He is being sold a satchelful of greenbacks in return for his genuine and hard-earned property.

We are revelling in mock prosperity and will all wake up some fine morning and find the Sheriff at our doors.

And why are we wasting our wealth? If it were for some noble purpose, we could afford to go poor for a generation and find comfort and consolation in a worthy deed. But no—we are wasting our wealth to continue a carnival of murder, to prolong an era of overwhelming disaster, to encourage the destruction of the white race, to tear down the achievements of civilization which have taken ages to construct, to repudiate religion and violate all established standards of decency, morality, and righteousness, to prostitute the progress of the world to the meanest and basest and vilest of purposes.

If we persist in doing this we will deserve the heavy penalty which will surely fall upon us. Let us end these shipments of food and ammunition and money to the warring nations of Europe for their sakes and for ours. Let us preserve our property and our self-respect. Let us end the war and the wastage of war and the woe which the war is wreaking. Let us feed our own people, build up our own country, conserve our own resources. America first and forever. HEARST.

Referendum on Peace.

Feb. 25, 1917.

S. S. Carvalho, New York American, New York City:

Don't you think the Francis editorial and declaration to Congress of the sentiment and will of the great majority of the people of the United States should be mailed to every member of Congress?

Two—I believe it would be a very big thing for all our papers to conduct a referendum peace vote in an election district in each one of our cities and in another district in each one of our States. The New York American would take a district in the city and a district up-State. The Boston American would do the same in Massachusetts, The Atlanta Georgian in Georgia, The Chicago Examiner the same in Illinois.

In California The San Francisco Examiner could take one district and The Los Angeles Examiner another. In this way we would get a nation-wide expression of opinion. The expression of every voter in the district ought to be secured, even if he has to be visited personally and made to put his sentiments in writing on a card. I think we should start this at once.

Predicted England's Defeat.

Feb. 26, 1917.

S. S. Carvalho, New York American, New York City.

Why not run the red, white, and blue title that we had for last edition through all editions for a few days during these troublous times? I think it will meet popular sentiment. Also please run little American flags to right and left of date lines on inside pages like the Chicago Herald. Our editorials should be patriotic without slightest criticism direct or indirect of Administration. I guess Germany is going to sink every ship that tries to run the submarine blockade and this means three things; first, that we will get into the war; second, that England will be starved into submission in less than six months. Third that Germany will then have time to devote to us, and this country will soon be in a condition similar to warring European countries. We must prepare in every way. Can we say these things editorially? HEARST.

If this attempt is not successful we propose an alliance on the following basis with Mexico: That we shall make war together and together make peace. We shall give general financial support; and it is understood that Mexico is to reconquer the lost territory in New Mexico Texas, and Arizona. The details are left to you for settlement. You are instructed to inform the President of Mexico there will be, on outbreak of war with the United States, and suggest that the President of Mexico, on his own initiative should communicate with Japan suggesting adherence at once to this plan. V New York, N. Y., 1:15 P. M., March 1, 1917.

Mr. William Randolph Hearst, Palm Beach, Fla.

Another Meyer-Gerard hoax, the alleged letter of Alfred Zimmerman published today, is obviously fakes; it is impossible to believe that the German Foreign Secretary would place his name under such a preposterous document. The letter is unquestionably a brazen forgery planted by British agents to stampede us into an alliance and to justify violations of the Monroe Doctrine by Great Britain. This impudent hoax is made public simultaneously with frantic appeals of allied Premiers enjoining the United States to enter the war. If Germany were plotting against us she would hardly adopt so clumsy a method. The real politiker of the Wilhelmstrasse would never offer an alliance based on such ludicrous propositions as the coriquest by Mexico of American territory. The creaking of the machinery of the British propaganda is clearly perceptible; the intention, of course, to arouse the war spirit of the peace loving West and to overwhelm the pacifists in every part of the country. The entire story reads like a dime novel concocted by our guest, Sir Gilbert Parker, Great Britain's chief propagandist, in co-operation with E. Phillips Oppenheim. Despite the insidious work of various imaginery artists in the pay of Great Britain, we have still retained our common sense. We can still differentiate between fiction and fact. The American people are willing to be thrilled, but refuse to be humbugged.

Assails Gregory and Burleson.

Telegram. March 2, 1917.

S. S. Carvalho, New York American, New York City:

Agree with Francis Zimmermann note all probability absolute fake and forgery, prepared by a very unscrupulous department. Everybody knows that the secret police are the most conscienceless manufacturers of forged evidence in the world. The ordinary police are bad enough, but the Federal agents, with the Government back of them, and more or less immune from punishment, are the most reckless concoctors of evidence and framers of jobs in the world.

Gregory's whole career in office, as Francis showed in editorial, has been as a spy fancier and plot conceiver. He has not been bound by morals, facts, or the Constitution. He has employed the secret service to enforce England's unlawful orders. He has attempted to put a bill through Congress to make any criticism of his acts or of the President's acts or of any political move or measure treasonable and punishable as such.

He is possibly violently pro-British. He is surely violently pro-corporation. He is located where he can do the corporations the most good, and he has been unwilling to be removed or they have been unwilling to have him removed even for a position on the Supreme bench. He and Burleson are a House's appointments and House has been a corporation lobbyist all his life.

Gregory and Burleson are so crooked that, as Alfred Henry Lewis used to say, one of them could lie in bed on top of the Woolworth Building and the other on the floor and look down and up forty-seven flights of winding stairs into each other's eyes and understand each other perfectly.

The object of the Zimmermann forgery was to frighten Congress into giving the President the powers that he demanded and perhaps also into passing the espionage bill. When Wilson wanted to give away the rights of the United States in the Panama Canal he pretended that he had private information of a dangerous international situation sufficient to justify his acts. He has never revealed his private information and no one now believes that he ever had any.

He could not repeat this false claim on this occasion, so a complaisant Cabinet officer this time undertook to manufacture sufficient false evidence to enable Wilson to have his way. It is possible that the British Secret Service co-operated in those plans. The only serious consequence is that the whole people of this country, 90 per cent. of whom do not want war, may be projected into war because of these misrepresentations and those forged documents, if they are forged.

I believe in war if the people want war. They have to do the fighting. They ought to do the deciding. I believe in first a referendum to the people and second, failing that, a decision by the people's representatives in Congress assembled.

We are getting very far away from democracy and very close to autocracy when we repose all the power of the people and all the power of the people's representatives in the hands of one man, whom we thereby create a dictator.

It may be the right thing to do, but Rome is so doing drifted from a republic into an empire.

I think the United States should remain a republic in fact as well as in name, and that the people should neither be deceived by the machinations of a tricky Attorney General nor deprived of their rights to decide a question of war or any other momentous question. I do not believe that any other individual has an interest in such questions equal to the interest of the great mass of the public, and I do not believe that the wisdom of any individual is equal to the collective wisdom of the people.

If we do not want to say all this editorially, we can say part of it editorially, and get some one to stand for interview as Hale used to do to bring all these points out, especially those about the probable forgery of the note. We should develop the forgery phase of the note for the Sunday paper if Francis and I seem to be right. DOCTOR.

Flags "Helping Sell Papers."

March 3, 1917.

S. S. Carvalho, New York American, New York City:

If situation quiets down, please remove color flags from first page and little flags from inside pages, reserving these for special occasions of a warlike or patriotic kind. I think they have been good for this week, giving us a very American character and probably helping sell papers, but to continue effective they should be reserved for occasions. HEARST.

President as a "Dictator."

March 3, 1917.

S. S. Carvalho, New York American, New York City:

I feel Congress should remain in continual session and protect the people's liberties. This making a dictator of President desperately dangerous precedent. It may do no immediate harm with a good President, but it may do immense injury with some bad one. Augustus, Rome's first Emperor was good man, but Nero, who acted under powers and precedents allowed Augustus, was fearfully bad one. Eternal vigilance is price of liberty. Wilson is Federalist as I wrote in first year of his term, and as Francis showed in alien and sedition editorial. The Federalists are autocratic in tendency. Hamilton was accused of trying to make monarchy of our Government.

"Monarchies are destroyed by poverty, republics by wealth." It is easier to establish a virtual monarchy in the rich America of today than in the poor America of a hundred years ago. We shy at the name of king, but we accept the spirit of absolutism. The Romans would have no king, but they accepted an imperator with more power than any king, and so lost their liberties. President of this republic today has more power than any king in any constitutional monarchy in the world. If he gets more he will be dictator and possibly a despot. It is the duty of true Democrats to be vigilant, especially as all these encroachments on popular rights are being made in the name of democracy.

Praise of Wilson Ordered.

S. S. Carvalho, New York American, New York City:

Think beneficial thing Senate not to give President great powers demanded. If my telegram of yesterday explaining my opposition to such powers and advocacy of extra session was not printed in Sunday paper, please elaborate it somewhat and make it an editorial approving action of Senate. Speak very highly of Wilson, say he is good President and undoubtedly meant to use power for good purposes, but the precedent is a dangerous one to establish, and Senate did well to retain its powers and rights and protect the liberties of the people.

Say that the few Senators who voted to retain the rights and functions of that body constitute a roll of honor. They did not lack respect for President, but they had a greater respect for the institution founded by the fathers. The day will come when their action will be commended by all the people. Professor Hart on the Stand.

Dr. Hart was on the stand about two hours this morning. Before he began his narrative telegrams from Elihu Root, A. Barton Hepburn and other prominent men, were read, in which the senders vouched for the sound Americanism of the Harvard professor.

"I appreciate the courtesy of the committee," said Dr. Hart, "in affording me this opportunity to explain my attitude toward the German propaganda in this country, due to the inclusion of my name on this list of men compiled by the German spy Fuehr.

"Had this thing happened after my death it would have been a terrible thing for my children. Whether my name was on that list by accident or for a purpose I do not know, but I think it was for a purpose. I wish to deny here that I ever had any dealing, secretly or openly, in any way, with any German spy or agent. My views and utterances have always been decidedly pro-Ally. My record is clear. I have never met this man Fuehr and I have never met this other man, Dr. Hale."

Professor Hart went on to say that before our entrance into the war he had known many Americans who were in favor of Germany and that most of these persons were as loyal and patriotic as other citizens after the United States entered the war.

"I know an Admiral of our navy," added Professor Hart, "who prophesied that Germany would win on land and on sea and evidently hoped for a German victory, yet since we entered the war none could have been more loyal to our cause than he."

Dr. Hart did not name this Admiral and there was much guessing in the courtroom as to the identity of the officer. He referred to the fact that he had spent a year and a half in German universities some thirty-odd years ago.

"Don't you think that our young men can get a better education right here at home instead of having to go to Germany?" Senator Nelson asked.

"I think that is quite possible," Dr. Hart replied.

Tainted by German Schooling.

"I want to say," added Senator Nelson, "that out in Minnesota I have found that young men who studied in Germany have what I term the German microbe in their systems and for that reason are in my opinion not quite so loyal as others who have not had the advantage of a German education. Now, don't you think that it is a bad thing for all concerned for our boys to go over there to Germany to finish their education when they get a better education right here at home?"

Dr. Hart did not think that a little foreign education would hurt a real American.

DENIAL BY MR. HITCHCOCK.

Senator Cites Record in Refutation of Reiswitz Letter.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, made a statement to the Senate today with reference to the letter of Reiswitz, former German Consul at Chicago, which characterized him as one of those who had agreed to co-operate with the Embargo Conference, to prevent shipment of munitions to the Allies.

Mr. Hitchcock declared he had never given his approval to the Embargo Conference, and that he had declined to make speeches before it. His attitude against the shipment of arms to the Allies, he said, was no secret, as he himself was the author of a Senate bill to that effect. Later he supported the bill to arm American merchantmen. But when the United States entered the war he abandoned his attitude of neutrality, and after that, he said, he supported all war measures.

"I stood first for a strict, peaceful, and impartial neutrality, even to the extent of selling no arms and ammunition and lending no money to either side," the Senator said. "Next, when Germany began a systematic attack on our commerce, I was ready to fight to protect our neutrality.

"I supported the President's request that we authorize him to assert and protect our neutrality by arming our merchant ships, and I had charge in the Senate of what was known as the Armed Neutrality Resolution, which died so dramatically here in the Senate at noon on March 4, 1917.

"A month later, when the issue changed from armed neutrality to war, I had charge of the declaration of war, which was briefly debated and passed by the Senate April 4, 1917.

"And so, Mr. President, like other Americans, I have passed from one phase of the situation to another—peaceful neutrality, armed neutrality, war."

HEARST "SITTING TIGHT."

"Investigation Isn't Bothering Me," the Publisher Adds.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., Dec. 10.—Asked tonight whether he had any comment to make concerning the evidence presented in the Senatorial investigation, W. R. Hearst said,

"I really have nothing to say yet. I am simply sitting tight and letting the fellows in Washington do the talking. And in the end I may let it pass. There is a great deal that I could say, and when they get through down there it may be the part of wisdom for me to reply. But the investigation isn't bothering me in the least. You see, after all, it isn't very important—at least, it isn't so far as I am concerned in it."

Mr. Hearst said that he was going to spend two or three days in Baltimore, and that afterward he might go to Washington. He had not decided yet about the Washington trip.

GLAD WELCOME FOR NEW YORK'S OWN

push against the Hindenburg line at St. Quentin, and I may say that we got it hard but the Germans got it a lot worse. One dark and dirty night I was in a dugout drinking a cup of coffee when a message came that I was wanted on top. When I had reached the place I met a doughboy who was covered with mud and water from his eyebrows down. He said: 'What will I do with these birds'? and pointed to a group of dismal-looking objects who stood back of him in the dark.

Doughboy Bags Thirty Germans.

"Upon closer examination they proved to be twenty-seven German soldiers and three officers who had been captured by the American soldier and brought somehow to our trenches. I questioned him to find out where he captured them, but the man was so excited with the rushing business he had just experienced that he could not explain the incident very clearly. All I could discover was that the German soldiers were with their officers some distance away when the doughboy came upon them at the rear, and after shooting three with his rifle the remainder threw up their arms and cried "Kamerad!" and he ordered them to walk ahead of him inside the American lines.

Private Dominic Valorie of the 107th Infantry, of 247 West 101st Street, New York, lost his right hand fighting at St. Quentin. Speaking of the battle yesterday he said:

"New York ought to be proud of its old National Guard and those who used to call the members 'wooden soldiers' should have been in France and Flanders and seen how our men fought.

"Before that fighting at St. Quentin the American soldiers had seen what the Germans had done to the people and the towns in France and Flanders, and when the order was given, they went for the enemy like wildcats. The Germans had had plenty of experience in the war game by that time, but it did not save them from the onslaught of our boys. They never had a look in, and their officers realized it as they saw their men cut down at their guns or driven back as the American boys rushed their lines. At St. Quentin some of our companies had as many as 80 per cent. casualties, but that does not mean seriously wounded, as many of them had only slight hurts and were able to go back in the firing lines after they had been attended to at the field hospital or first dressing station."

Tells of St. Quentin Fight.

Private James Brady of the 106th Regiment of Infantry, who lives at 239 Withers Street, Brooklyn, was another of the New York heroes engaged in the fighting around St. Quentin, where he was severely wounded in the right thigh and leg.

"The fight was very hot," he said. "For more than five hours our regiment attacked the enemy's position. We were swept by the enemy artillery and machine-gun fire. Many of our boys went down, but the regiment never yielded a foot. We went forward steadily, yard by yard, right into the German lines, and they saw us and lost heart. Out of 300 men in our company there were less than 30 on their feet when I was knocked out and sent to the rear."

Lieutenant John Heyl of the 33d Division was wounded on the 10th of August at Chippeley, a village on the Somme River, while fighting with the Australians, of whom he spoke in the highest praise.

There were three soldiers in the medical ward on the Empress of Britain, who had lost their left eyes in battle, and were called "the one-eyed trio." They were Henry Visir, 106th Regiment, of 159 Messing Avenue, South Ozone Park, Brooklyn; Bergan Kuperman of the 305th Regiment, of 6 East 138th Street, New York, and Corporal William Mitchell of the 105th Regiment, who was hit at St. Quentin, while his two chums were wounded at Cambrai.

Another soldier severely wounded at St. Quentin was Private Valentine Allen of the 108th Regiment, which was the old 74th Regiment of Rochester. One foot was shattered and one leg perforated with pieces of shrapnel, yet he appeared cheerful yesterday and enjoyed the cigarettes that the Red Cross workers handed to him.

Others Severely Wounded.

Other New York soldiers who returned with honorable wounds yesterday were:

Private Wallace Rostrom of Headquarters Company, 107th Infantry, lost his right foot on Sept. 27 at St. Quentin as he was carrying back a wounded American machine gunner to safety.

Private W. D. Stevens, Company K, Palisade Park, N. J., who was a member of the 107th Infantry, was struck by a twelve-inch shell at St. Quentin. Seven pieces of the shell struck him in the right leg and it was found necessary to amputate it. He said: "I might be in bad, but I'm pretty glad to be here, believe me, when I think of all the others killed around me."

Private Louis Sweitzen of 71 West 101st Street was injured in both hands and thigh by machine gun fire.

Private Elmer Murray, 1,809 Gleason Avenue, the Bronx, was in the big engagement at Saint Souples, and wounded in the left thigh on Oct. 17.

Private Bernard Owens, Company H, 106th Infantry, of 881 Pacific Street Brooklyn, on Sept. 27, while attacking a machine gun nest, was discovered by the Germans and received serious wounds.

Private Julian Gerst, Company K, 106th Infantry, of 1,037 Faile Street, the Bronx, said that on Sept. 3 he was in a fierce engagement at Mount Kemmel when he was shot through both legs.

"Two fellows by me were killed," he said. "I was picked up later by some German prisoners we had taken previously, and taken into our own lines. Fritz frequently did that, believing that he would get a little better treatment from his captors by such actions."

The soldiers got an enthusiastic reception at the pier, and would have had a bigger one if the public had been allowed inside. The Red Cross band and the band of the patrol played while the units debarked and marched to the ferryboat waiting to convey them to Long Island City on their way to Camp Mills.

The American transport Kroonland, which was due to arrive on Sunday from Brest but was delayed by the strong westerly gales, reached Quarantine last evening at 5:30 o'clock, too late to go to her pier.

The Health Officer of the Port went on board and inspected the 63 officers, 1,180 enlisted men, and 106 civilians on board and passed the ship so that she will go to Pier 2, Hoboken this morning when the military authorities are ready to receive her passengers. According to the statement shouted through a megaphone by one of the deck officers to the police boat Patrol when she went alongside, there were 20 officers and 59 men from the headquarters of the 76th Division, and 2 officers and 218 men from the headquarters troop of the division, 26 casual officers, and 15 enlisted men.

There are 5 officers and 145 enlisted men in Ambulance Corps No. 504, while in the postal detachment of the 76th there are 24 men; officers of the French mission, 9, civilians, 41; overseas couriers, 1 officer and 1 man; 65 civilian seamen; convoy for sick, 15 enlisted men, 5 nurses; sick and wounded, 704, as follows: Bedridden, 32; tuberculosis, 35; requiring no special attention, 637.

As the soldiers lining the rail yelled out their greeting to the Patrol, Police Inspector John F. Dwyer, who was in charge, ordered the band to play "Keep the Home Fires Burning," "Over There," and "Home, Sweet Home." Several soldiers could be seen dancing on deck, while their comrades who were mailmed leaned over the rail and cheered and waved their caps to the members of the Mayor's Welcoming Committee on the police boat.

Charles S. Fay, a marine, requested that his sister, Mrs. Charles M. Stewart, 1,007 Fifteenth Street, Aurora, Neb., be notified of his safe arrival, and Private Joseph Novotny asked that his brother, a patrolman attached to the Elizabeth Street Station, should tell his mother that he was all right. Novotny had been wounded and gassed, and was a long time in hospital in France, he said. Many other soldiers and wounded men sent messages in envelopes which they threw onto the Patrol.

Private Louis Marr, a member of the 304th Ambulance Corps, threw an envelope to John F. Ward, wireless operator on the Patrol, on which was written: "Kindly tell my mother, Mrs. Mary Marr, 4 West 101st Street, that I have arrived. Tell her to get out the cookpots, for I am big on the eats right now."

Private Marr was at the battle of Sedan on Nov. 11 when the order came to cease firing.

"In the last fifteen minutes of fighting, beginning at 10:45 o'clock in the morning," he said, "I saw men in our ranks killed who had gone through the war almost from the start without even being scratched. It was amusing when the cease firing order was executed at 11 o'clock to see the white flag of the Germans raised and after that a number of the beaten boches came to our camps and presented us with buttons off their coats, epaulets, German coins, and other souvenirs. They even tried to talk to us, but as they could converse in nothing but German we were unable to make it very agreeable for them."

Among the transports, in addition to the Kroonland, due to arrive today or tomorrow with troops, are the Adriatic, from Liverpool, with 80 officers and 2,208 enlisted men; the Calamares, with 14 officers and 1,472 men, who are described as "All navy personal"; the Tenadores, with 882 men and 149 civilians, and the hospital ship Mercy, with 398 enlisted men. The only two reported last night were the Adriatic and the Mercy, both due to arrive this afternoon at their piers in New York and Hoboken, respectively.

WOULD ENLIVEN WELCOME.

Wickersham Deplores "the Little Ado" Over Soldiers' Homecoming.

Addressing the University of Pennsylvania Club at a smoker given last night at the Hotel Martinique, George W. Wickersham, former Attorney General and an alumnus of the university, deplored "the little ado" with which the returning soldiers were being received, gave high praise to the men for the manner in which they had conducted themselves in France, and attributed much of the credit to the college men in the army.

"The future of the problems confronting us," said Mr. Wickersham, "lies with the young men, and these young men who are coming back to us are being allowed to pass through the city with little ado. This does not indicate that we are an ungrateful country, but, unfortunately, it is just our busy American way. Of course, Mr. Hearst is greeting them, and perhaps that is something, but unless we do something much more striking they will surely think us ungrateful. It lies with you college men to work out the best possible form of welcome.

"Every one who has returned from France testifies to the high principles shown by the men we have sent, and they have justified everything that has been said to the effect that they were pure, decent, clean American fellows. France is bubbling over with adulation, and it is difficult to stand up under excessive adulation, especially when it comes from the young, but, with it all, they have kept their feet on the ground."

COBLENZ CORDIAL TO OUR TROOPS

any scarcity of food I have not been able to find it. The famous old Monopol Hotel and the Coblenzerhof and numerous restaurants serve meals that would tickle the palate of an epicure. The only thing not up to the New York standard is bread, which is dark.

Coblenz seems lighthearted—why, I cannot tell. Where Treves greeted us with stolid indifference, Coblenz seems almost to welcome and to want to make merry over our coming. The German Army departed only yesterday. I am sure I cannot understand it.

At almost any other time one would have felt happy to be here; but now, seeing Coblenz one at once remembers Rheims. Seeing Coblenz sleek and prosperops, one feels that Germany is not yet repentant.

City Authorities Co-operating.

COBLENZ, Dec. 8, (Associated Press.)—Coblenz tonight is under the complete military control of the Americans, with the municipal authorities co-operating.

At the Coblenz end of the three bridges across the Rhine, American sentries were posted in the evening.

In the afternoon the American forces took charge of the barracks and other buildings evacuated that morning by the German troops.

The American forces comprised the Second Battalion of the 39th Infantry, which arrived here this afternoon in answer to a request from the German authorities. The reception of the Americans was most friendly. The Americans marched direct from the train which brought them from Treves to the various arsenals, barracks, and storehouses, where they established guards.

The battalion is commanded by Lieut. Col. James Lockett, with Major Fred Hackett second in command. In addition to their rifles and ammunition, the soldiers carried a full pack, containing emergency rations, and additional food supplies were brought by the train to tide the men over until ration trains arrive.

To Cross Rhine Friday.

The Americans will not cross the Rhine until further orders, the battalion remaining in Coblenz more in the nature of military police until additional forces arrive. A company of engineers was prepared to throw a temporary bridge across the stream, but there were already four bridges, two here, one in the north and another to the south, over which the American army is expected to cross Dec. 13 in a thirty-mile arc.

Colonel James Rhea of Texas, head of the American commission, has been dealing for four days with the local authorities on questions incident to the taking over of the bridgehead. Instead of antagonism or even passive acquiescence he encountered lively co-operation.

The Mayor of Coblenz issued a proclamation in which he requested the inhabitants to refrain from all acts of discourtesy or violence and to accord the Americans such assistance as was possible. It was due to the Mayor's request, supplemented by one from the military commandant, that the Americans are here today.

A local committee was appointed to assist the Americans in assuming control, and officers of the German Army remained behind after the last of their men had marched out, in order to deliver to the Americans great stores of supplies.

The officers with Colonel Rhea are Colonel Clarence Sherrill of Greensboro N. C.; Colonel George Spaulding of Michigan, and Colonel Henry M. White of Kentucky.

While the Americans were marching into the city today the last division of the German Army was only a few kilometers beyond the Rhine, moving in orderly fashion, with the spirit of a holiday rather than that of a defeated army. Almost every man had a rosette or a sprig of green in his cap. Many of the trucks and wagons had on top of them quantities of Christmas greens.

Formal delivery of stores has not yet been made, but an officer today delivered a map to Colonel Rhea, showing the location of great quantities of ammunition, guns, and general stores, both in Coblenz and in the fortress across the river. It is estimated that more than 600 trucks will be given up. The total value of the property to be delivered perhaps will run well into millions of dollars.

Here, as at Treves, the Americans are dealing with the de facto authorities. The Workmen's Council is maintaining a commission, but the officers the Americans found were those who long had been functioning, and the Americans are leaving to them the problem of arranging their own affairs in the new party's council. An indication, however, that the determination not to treat with the council will not cause any trouble for the American Commission is the receipt of various messages signed by Mathias Erzberger dealing with subjects which the Americans have discussed with the Mayor.

The Americans have not attempted to interfere in any way with local institutions of the manner of life of the people. The inhabitants retire and arise when they please, and permission is even given to those whose business requires it to cross and recross the Rhine at will.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 10, (Associated Press.)—Rhenish newspapers received here contain a dispatch describing the passage of the 42d American Division toward Coblenz. It says the Americans were very courteous. They only demanded the surrender of arms, not otherwise interfering with the citizens. The newspapers are enjoying full liberty of publication.

Watch Him Grow!

Here's Where He Decides That Clothes Are a Bore and Forgets to Clasp the Buckles of His Trousers at the Knees.

"Aw gee!" This is an epitome of his sentiments on the subject of clothes. Drought might settle upon his neck and ears at their unfamiliarity with water. To remove the collar button from his shirt in order to change his collar is a feat as difficult (to him) as launching a battleship. A new overcoat? The very suggestion aligns his mother in the enemy's camp.

CZECHS WANT ARMY IN RUSSIA SENT HOME

Insist if 80,000 Men Stay There Allies Must Back Them with Definite Policy.

30,000 RETURN FROM ITALY

New State to be Represented at Peace Conference by Foreign Minister Benes.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—The heads of the new Czechoslovak State are awaiting with some anxiety the decision of the associated powers as to their policy toward Russia and what they want to do with the 80,000 Czechs now in Siberia.

It was explained to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent at the Czech Legation, just opened here, that President Masaryk was quite willing that the Czech force should continue in Russia, provided it was properly supported by the Allies with munitions and supplies and a definite policy toward Russia was adopted, but there was too great need for Czech soldiers at home for them to be left in Siberia merely because the Allies could not make up their minds to withdraw them.

The Czech view, based on their experiences, is that if the Allies were determined to pacify Russia they could do it with a comparatively small force. One hundred thousand men properly equipped could easily hold the railroads, and the Czechs have found the Bolshevist forces of very little importance. They fight poorly, it is said, and even the troops raised by the more stable Russian elements are so poorly disciplined that they have little effective value. The Czechs therefore believe that a small allied force could control the means of communication and maintain order till the Russians have had time to develop a stable government of their own.

Meanwhile another Czech force of 30,000, which was fighting on the Italian front and had been formed from prisoners and deserters from the Austrian Army, is being transferred to Bohemia. There, almost alone in Austria, order prevails. The Czechs are creating a regular civil administration, and have even begun to issue their own stamps.

The only source of trouble is in the eastern districts which once belonged to Hungary. All the population is Czech but the local bureaucracy is Hungarian and it refused to recognize the new order of things. Some rioting occurred, but it has been suppressed by French troops, which have occupied Budapest.

The Czechoslovaks are, as a result of four years of war, in need of every kind of material help. Not only are they short of food but also of clothing, boots, and raw materials. Aid is being sent them partly from London and partly from the International Food Council in Paris.

The new State will be represented at the peace conference by Doctor Benes Foreign Minister. President Masaryk may also attend, but he has not yet decided to do so.

Czechoslovakia is the first of the new European States to hoist its flag of two broad stripes, one white and one red, and open its legation in London. Its representatives have received full diplomatic recognition, and to its President, Dr. Masaryk, when he left London a few days ago, an official farewell was accorded at the station with an escort of Welsh Guards. It is a wonderful change for a man who only two years ago was merely a Professor at King's College, and to fill up his time was forced to take up the study of the Episcopal Church.

KAROLYI ATTEMPTS SUICIDE.

Despairs of Success of His Efforts to Reconstruct Hungary.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—Count Michael Karolyi, who took a prominent part in the recent proclamation of a Hungarian republic, is reported in a Budapest telegram to have attempted suicide in despair of the success of his efforts to reconstruct Hungary, says a Central News dispatch from Amsterdam.

CZERNIN FEARED GERMANY.

Says This Deterred Austria in Her Efforts for Peace.

VIENNA, Dec. 9, (Associated Press.)—Austria's desperate efforts in 1917 to withdraw from the war were described in a statement made to The Associated Press today by Count Czernin, former Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, (a summary of which was previously cabled to America.) General Ludendorff, the German Chief Quartermaster General, was the great stumbling block, and Austria feared, in undertaking a separate peace with the Entente, that Germany would declare war on her.

"I never thought it possible to beat the Entente, particularly after America entered the war," said Count Czernin. "There were two ways to arrange peace. One was a separate peace with the Entente, the other a general peace together with Germany.

"A separate peace would have meant war with Germany, since thereby we, because of our geographical position, would have cut off from Germany her Turco-Bulgarian allies, and it would have been impossible for Germany, with her allies' interests in Turkey and Bulgaria, to allow us to pull out of the war. I have proof that Germany at once would have made war on us.

"Consider that two months ago, when she was beaten, with a revolution in her own country, she was then strong enough to send troops to defend Bavaria, when Andrassy, the last Imperial Foreign Minister, offered President Wilson a separate peace. What would Germany have been able to do six months before, when she was almost victorious in France?

"Consider what a war with Germany meant for us—first, civil war, because of our 10,000,000 German population, and also the possibility of the Hungarians turning against us, with Tisza a pro-German, and in addition the uncertainty of the actions of the Poles and Czechs, who were already dealing with the Entente.

"Even supposing that we had turned over to the Entente and had succeeded in winning the war—there never would have been any winning side for us, because the Entente, by the conference of London in 1916, promised freedom to the various peoples of the empire, leaving us in the divided condition we are in at the present time."

Referring to Germany, Count Czernin said that there was only one group in that country bent upon a victorious peace and declaring that England must be crushed.

"This was the Military Party," he went on, "headed by Ludendorff, who is a remarkable military man. But it was our misfortune that he was too strong and too popular with the soldiers; so the Emperor needed him and could not send him away.

"I sent Emperor Charles a letter, a copy of which I have at your disposition, declaring to him that the submarine warfare surely would fail, that we would never win, and that we must force Germany to conclude peace. I told him that a revolution was coming, that Emperor William would lose his throne, and that he himself would lose his throne, and that every Government head must see that we were the losers.

"I urged upon him that we must try for peace before we were crushed, that Germany's situation was the same as ours and that only military men believed it possible to win the war. America's entrance, I pointed out, meant our ruin and her influence would be felt within a few months in spite of the belief in Germany that America would never be able to arrive in time."

PROCLAIMS UNION OF ALL RUMANIANS

SOCIALIST PARTY WON OVER

Rumanian Troops Expected to Occupy at Once Twenty-six Provinces of Hungary.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERNE, Dec. 9.—A great festival of Transylvanian Rumanians was held at Gyula Fehervar, or Klausenburg, north of Hermanstadt, on Dec. 1, when the National Assembly solemnly proclaimed the union of Transylvania with Rumania. According to Magyar papers a crowd of 100,000 people in all sorts of picturesque costumes filled the military training ground and enthusiastically acclaimed the speeches of the national leaders. Perfect order was maintained by the National Guard and armed peasants, and there was no drunkenness.

The National Assembly of 200 members met in the offices of the Casino, among the guests being a Rumanian General and French airmen. National Leader Pop presided. A resolution was unanimously passed declaring the union of all Rumanian people in all the territories they inhabit, and affirming the inalienable right of Rumanians to all the Banat Territory between Maros Theiss and the Danube. Full liberties are to be guaranteed to all national minorities in respect to language and administration.

Other points of the declaration are universal suffrage, religious equality, radical reform of labor legislation, and the formation of a National Council, with full authority to represent the nation internally and externally during the preliminary negotiations.

The Socialists said they would vote for the union only on condition that the Rumanian Kingdom was democratised, but on hearing from Ernest Gogu, who had just arrived from Bucharest, that universal suffrage and land reform were guaranteed in Rumania, the Socialists withdrew their opposition, and the union was voted unanimously amid great cheering. The Socialist leader, Sarmanka, declared that the Socialists would not forsake their Magyar brothers in their class struggle, but nationally must be with their own people. The National Council was elected, among its members being Octavian Goga and Lucacia, who is now in Paris.

A Cabinet was formed, with Pop as Premier and Foreign Minister; Manin, Minister of the Interior and War, and Goldis Minister of Religion and Education.

The seat of the Government for the present is Hermannstadt. Later it will possibly be Klausenburg. It is expected that Rumanian troops will occupy within the next fortnight twenty-six Hungarian provinces claimed by the Rumanians.

Negotiations between the Magyar Government and the Czechoslovak Envoy, Hodja, have been interrupted owing to the issue in the Prague press of a communiqué stating that Hodja is not empowered to act as plenipotentiary, but only to liquidate all relations between the Budapest Government and the Slovak Nation. Hodja states that this is probably a misunderstanding caused by the fact that his interviews have reached Prague before his official reports. He will explain everything to President Masaryk when he arrives.

KRAMARZ TELLS CZECH AIM.

Premier Outlines New Republic's Plans for Future.

PRAGUE, Dec. 8, (Associated Press.)—"There are people who believe the world must come to an end because the Austrian and German empires no more exist, but I know we will all be happier, and especially you in America. It is the first time in the history of nations that generosity has ever conquered selfishness, and when the news came to me within my prison walls that America had entered the war, I was unable to believe it," said Dr. Karl Kramarz, Premier of Czechoslovakia, to a representative of The Associated Press today.

Dr. Kramarz for many years fought for the rights of the Czech people. He was arrested at Prague on July 1, 1915, and, following his trial at Vienna, was sentenced to death. King Alfonso of Spain appealed in his behalf and the death sentence was commuted to fifteen years' imprisonment. Dr. Kramarz was released under Emperor Charles's amnesty proclamation on July 14, 1917. He was named Premier of Czechoslovakia on Nov. 19 last

"Our sole ambition is to live peacefully and prosperously and to become a strong friend of the Entente against the Germans," Dr. Kramarz continued. "It is probable that Germany will remain a menace, since it is impossible to destroy such a strong nationality. As for our political future, we do not see a way to tie up Austrians or Hungarians.

"It is certain that we will try to maintain commercial relations with the Jugoslavs and the Rumanians. Regarding the tariff, it is certain we must maintain a protective wall against Germany or our industries will be ruined.

"We also desire to establish the frontiers of ancient Bohemia. However, we will be fairer with the Germans than they were with us. We will not oppress those within our borders. We will give them every liberty, their own schools and language, but the Government must be ours."

"The MAGIC of 60 PAGES"

A Gateway to Your Foreign Markets

Today you are being told by eminent statesmen, by the wisest political economists, and by far-seeing captains of industry that it is a privilege, a duty—even a necessity—for American merchants to seek foreign markets.

Some years ago, more by accident than by design, it was discovered that there was a demand in foreign markets for the American Vogue.

If YOU are interested in foreign markets—in the markets of Great Britain and Her colonies, in the markets of Latin America and Spain, in the markets of Continental Europe—you will be keenly interested in the story that this page unfolds—the story of "The Magic of 60 Pages."

THE VOGUE COMPANY

NINETEEN WEST FORTY FOURTH STREET NEW YORK

EDNA WOOLMAN CHASE, Editor — CONDE NAST, Publisher — RALPH F. BLANCHARD, Advertising Manager

Mr. American Advertiser,
Busytown, U.S.A.

SUBJECT:
The Magic of Sixty Pages

Dear Sir:

In editorial offices in New York, London and Paris, there are gathered, twice a month, some sixty pages of editorial matter - articles, sketches and photographs - which are arranged, grouped together, printed and offered the public under the title and trade name of "VOGUE".

During the past ten years, discriminating taste, broad knowledge, artistic ability and keen intelligence have been put into these pages to such an extent that they have proven themselves an astonishing power of worldwide attraction. No periodical in the history of publishing has found itself so firmly established in so many different countries.

Distance has been no barrier. The American Vogue, before the establishment of separate foreign editions, was sold in quantities in the most distant countries of the world.

An alien language has been no barrier. Even the fact of publication in a language alien to that of the community in which the American Vogue was distributed did not prevent its sale by thousands, in Russia, Italy, Spain and France.

Imitation Vogues the world over have been no barrier. Hundreds of thousands of dollars spent in attempts to establish imitation Vogues in America, France and England have not stopped the ever-growing popularity of the original.

The magic of these sixty pages that first established Vogue in America has now established Vogue in Great Britain and her Colonies; Vogue in Latin America and Spain, and Vogue in Continental Europe.

The American manufacturer who is about to essay foreign markets will find in these foreign editions of Vogue gateways to new fields, with the firm support of Vogue's established standing.

Yours very truly,

Condé Nast

The Story of Three Vogues

THE BRITISH VOGUE

IN the Spring of 1912, the American Vogue was placed on sale in England, primarily for the convenience of traveling Americans.

To our astonishment, the British public, not Americans, promptly bought up the edition, and each new issue of VOGUE found the British public so eager for it that in the Spring of 1915 plans were made to launch it as a separate British periodical. The outbreak of war, however, necessitated our abandoning the project, but in the Spring of 1916 Britain's embargo on paper and periodicals forced us to choose between losing the American Vogue's already strong foothold in England and establishing a British Vogue, regardless of adverse industrial conditions.

WITH a very strong faith in Vogue, but a considerable doubt that we could do more than maintain our already won foothold in England, until after the war, we brought out the first London issue of the British Vogue in September, 1916. Our faith in the undertaking was soon more than justified. Results demonstrated that the British Vogue was very far from being a foolhardy enterprise. Two years after its establishment in England, the British Vogue achieved a larger circulation in the British Isles than any other British class periodical devoted to women's interests. From its very first issue, it has been sold at a higher "per copy" price than any of its competitors; and its present "per copy" price is higher than that asked by any other British periodical.

As to its advertising: In the month of September, 1918, when many of the best judges thought that the war would continue for at least another year, the British Vogue—a two-year-old periodical born in the midst of war—achieved the amazing record of carrying a larger volume of advertising than that carried by any of the thirty-five leading American periodicals, with three exceptions only: The Saturday Evening Post (weekly); the American Vogue (semi-monthly); and the Literary Digest (weekly).

THE SPANISH VOGUE

THE first edition of the Spanish Vogue was published in August, 1918, only four months ago.

Hitherto, the motive for creating periodicals designed to circulate in Latin America has been 10% editorial inspiration, and 90% avidity, to secure coveted advertising. Unconsciously perhaps, the prospective publisher has built a publication more nearly designed to attract American advertising merchants than to satisfy Latin American readers. The inevitable result is that most American periodicals prepared for Latin American circulation are not sold to the people of Latin America—but are given to them.

In the case of Vogue, the inspiration and procedure have been directly opposite. The American Vogue had actually achieved a sale of some 3,000 copies in Latin America before the thought ever occurred to me of establishing a Spanish Vogue as a separate magazine property and of soliciting advertising for it.

What editorial inspiration will do is illustrated in the story of the distribution of that first edition of the Spanish Vogue.

The problem of Latin American distribution is not simple. There was no central distributing agency into which a magazine's circulation could be poured. Expense, time, distance, precluded the sending of a force of agents. In addition, the necessity of dealing with thousands of individual news-dealers whose credit was not established, forced us to a cash-in-advance basis.

THUS, last June, we found ourselves engaged in the rather hazardous task of introducing a new property into fifteen different countries, with no more ambitious advance propaganda than a circular that cost less than $1,500, and said in effect: "Vogue, beginning with the August issue, will be published in Spanish. It will be sold to dealers on a non-returnable basis at thirty cents per copy, payable in American gold. Copies will be shipped on receipt of this price in advance."

Notwithstanding this unfavorable approach, the sale of that first issue in Latin America and Spain jumped from 3,000 copies (American Vogue) to 10,000 copies (Spanish Vogue) net paid sale.

Vogue had the magic of its sixty pages. The Latin American Vogue has not sprung from an advertising interest, but from an editorial inspiration.

THE FRENCH VOGUE

THE development of the sale of Vogue in France and Continental Europe came to us as a greater surprise than its successful sale to the British public. When the first supply of American Vogues was sent to Rolls House Company, the English concern through whom we were distributing the American Vogue in England, the sale of Vogue outside of Great Britain was not contemplated.

But much to our surprise, Vogue's sale in France and the countries of Continental Europe grew apace with its sales in the British Isles. Within two years of the time it was first supplied, we discovered that Vogue had achieved a sale in France of 7,000 copies, of over 1,500 copies in Italy, of 1,000 copies in Spain, of some 2,000 copies in far-away Russia, and a considerable sale in Norway and Sweden, Switzerland, Bulgaria and Roumania.

IT will be readily appreciated that the success of Vogue in France and the countries of Continental Europe is an even greater tribute to the magic power of its sixty pages, for first; in France and the other countries of Continental Europe, it has been under the great handicap of being published in a language alien to that of the countries in which it achieved such a broad sale.

And secondly: in England we had the benefit of a very intelligent distributing agency who had representatives covering the newsstands and ably promoting the circulation of Vogue in the British Isles. On the Continent, we had not one bit of circulation promotion machinery at work. The circulation there grew simply through the momentum of the publication's own power of attraction. It grew without the expenditure of a dollar on a traveling representative, without a line of advertising space, without even a modest circular.

THE WAR IS OVER

During the past few months we have devoted our advertising space to patriotic propaganda, urging the purchase of Liberty Bonds, stimulating interest in the Red Cross and the United War Charities, and doing our bit in any and every direction calculated to promote the common cause.

The War is now over—Peace is here all but the signing—a more normal condition in business will gradually supervene — and so, from now on, we shall resume our regular advertising, beginning with brief references to our war work for the Government, and following it with brief preachments on the value of the work we can do for you.

BRITISH UNYIELDING ON FREEDOM OF SEAS

Attorney General Smith Declares Against Abridgment of Naval Rights in War.

GEDDES OF SIMILAR MIND

First Sea Lord Also Insists That Germany Shall Pay Full Cost of the War.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—One of the gravest problems at the Peace Conference will be based on what is meant by "freedom of the seas" and what concessions Great Britain is going to make in that direction, said Sir Frederick E. Smith, Attorney General, in a speech at Liverpool yesterday. He added that he was engaged in preparing a memorandum on the subject for the War Cabinet.

"America has rendered brilliant service in the cause of civilization," he said, "and Great Britain is bound to approach the conference with a determination to concede everything possible to American sentiment and American views, having regard for national security and the existence of the empire. Americans must remember that the seas are free to every one in peace time, and that to none has that freedom been denied. In time of war, however, one might as well talk of the freedom of the land as the freedom of the seas. Imagine Belgium, Northern France, or Serbia talking about freedom of the land. The moment war arises, great coercive and primeval forces assert themselves, and the region of law is abandoned for the assertion of naval and military forces. Belligerents during the war had a right to carry on war. Neutrals had the right to carry on trade. But if there was a collision between the right of belligerents to put restraint upon the enemy and the right of neutrals to carry on trade, the subordinate right of the neutrals had to give way to the imperious primary right of the belligerent.

"It has been recognized for more than three centuries that a nation which is supreme is as much entitled to impose its will maritimely on inferior enemies by blockade as a nation stronger on land is able to impose its will militarily on a weaker nation.

"I am not sure that Great Britain will not have to say to the Allies at the Peace Conference: 'We shall be quite satisfied with such a definition of freedom of the seas as will enable the British Navy in the unfortunate event of future war to do exactly what the British Navy, aided by the American Navy, has been doing for the last eighteen months.'"

The establishment of a League of Nations will not result in the development of a world in which no wars will occur, and in which armaments will be unnecessary and reason supplant violence, in the opinion of Sir Eric Geddes, First Lord of the Admiralty, expressed in an address at Cambridge last night. Under the most favorable conditions, he said it was to be expected that a police force would be required. On the sea, he added, the British Navy had performed that function faithfully and impartially, preventing the free nations from being crushed by Germany. He regarded it as inconceivable that the supremacy of the British Navy would ever be surrendered.

He expressed the belief that Germany should be made to refund the full cost of the war and pay for all the damage she had done by sea and land, to the uttermost farthing.

In concluding peace the Allies must not make the same mistakes that Germany made in connection with Alsace-Lorraine in 1871, Premier Lloyd George said in the course of the address he made to the meeting of women in Albert Hall yesterday. The peace must be just, he declared, "because justice breeds justice and commands acceptance, while vengeance stirs up wrath and breeds vengeance."

The Premier contended that the peace must be a stern one, however, because it must have the sternness of justice as well as the equity of justice.

The Premier reaffirmed his declaration that the Germans in the United Kingdom should be expelled from it because they had abused its hospitality and should not get another chance.

Archibald S. Hurd, the naval writer, in The Daily Telegraph says with reference to the German idea that the surrendered German warships would be returned to Germany after peace was signed, that it pointed to a complete misapprehension of the intentions of the Allies, "for it is certain that these ships will never again fly the German ensign." Mr. Hurd says that the only course to adopt is to distribute the ships among the Allies in accordance with the losses which each has suffered in maintaining command of the sea.

German submarines, on the other hand, should cease to exist, he says, and he suggests they be broken up and the parts used for other purposes.

EXPECTS NO TREATY TILL ASSEMBLY MEETS

Berlin Paper Says Allies Will Delay Action—Report Royalist Move by Prince Henry.

LONDON, Dec. 10, (Associated Press.)—The Deutsche Tagezeitung of Berlin says it learns from a reliable source, an Amsterdam dispatch states, that the Entente Powers will refuse to conclude a preliminary peace treaty with Germany before the meeting of a German National Assembly.

At a demonstration before the Bismarck Monument in Berlin Sunday, Minister Heinrich Ströbel said:

"It is incredible that the military is still in the hands of von Hindenburg, who is a great reactionary. I am in possession of a letter from von Hindenburg which makes it apparent that he overthrew von Bethmann Hollweg because the latter was inclined to reforms and not strong enough to stick up for a peace of victory."

Prince Henry of Prussia, brother of the former Emperor, has proclaimed the establishment of a Royalist Party in Germany, according to reports from Holland received in Paris.

A Munich dispatch says that Premier Eisner, in a statement, calls on the people of Bavaria to maintain strict order. He says that disturbances such as those that occurred Friday night cannot be tolerated, and that the troops assigned to preserve order have been instructed to use their weapons ruthlessly if necessary.

Churches to Hold Peace Jubilee.

Six Episcopal churches will join in a peace jubilee at the 69th Regiment Armory on Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The speakers will be Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo and Lieut. Col. Charles W. Whittlesey, commander of the famous "Lost Battalion." Bishop David H. Greer will preside. The churches have formed an organization to promote efficiency and co-ordination in their work. The association thus formed is described as the Associated Episcopal Parishes of Central Manhattan, and the members are the Church of the Ascension, Calvary Church, Grace Church, the Church of the Holy Communion, St. George's Church, and the Church of St. Mark's in the Bouwerie.

DENIES PEACE NEWS WILL BE RESTRICTED

Paris Committee on Public Information Promises to Help Along Full Reports.

CABLE RATIONING REJECTED

London Report Says Allied Agreement on Censorship Problem May Be Necessary.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Dec. 10.—Emphatic denial is made by representatives of the American Government in Paris, notably the Committee on Public Information, that there is to be any official restriction on sending Peace Conference news to America by independent correspondents or news agencies. The question of rationing wire facilities has been suggested by at least one cable company, but the proposition has been flatly rejected by the Cable Section of the American Committee as unworkable.

The declaration of this committee is that there will be no restrictions on transmission of news, except those imposed by wire limitations. The cables are in poor condition because of lack of repairs during the war, and the companies are not at all optimistic about improvement in time for the flood of Peace Conference news, because of the practical impossibility of making thorough cable repairs in the North Atlantic in the Winter months.

The Committee on Public Information says it is here to help the sending of news, not to hinder it. One specific thing it proposes to do in this connection is to send routine official statements from members of the American Government by wireless to New York for distribution there to all publications and news agencies asking for it. Such statements will be sent after the manner of battle communiqués, without comment or attempt at interpretation. This is to relieve the cables.

The correspondents here are assured that they will have copies in Paris of all such communiqués, and be allowed to send such comment and other supplementary matter concerning them as they see fit. As to the censorship, it is theoretically no longer a bar to news transmission. But both the French and the American Censor Bureaus have maintained their machinery and personnel in working order, which they attribute to the fact that the war is not over till the peace is signed.

In Doubt Over Censorship.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—The Daily News today stated:

"Very rigorous censorship will be maintained during the Peace Conference. The question has been discussed at length by the allied Governments and drastic measures are said to have been decided upon in order to prevent publication of inaccurate or premature reports which might prejudice the issue of the deliberations. It understood an official communiqué will be issued daily, and there is talk of absolute prohibition of all other matter bearing on the conferences, including interviews, which will be bad news indeed for a shipload of American journalists now hustling across the Atlantic."

THE NEW YORK TIMES learns from an authoritative source that the foregoing is inaccurate. The British Government decided some time ago to lift censorship on political news, and so far as this country is concerned, there is no intention of restoring it, it being held that the English press as a whole handles international questions with due restraint.

The general question of censorship during the conference is, however, one that concerns all the allied nations, and a policy common to and agreed upon by all may be necessary. It is very probable that this question will be one of the first matters discussed at preliminary conferences when President Wilson himself will have an opportunity of stating his wishes in regard to America, to which he referred in his message to Congress.

JULIET BREITUNG TO MARRY AGAIN

HERBERT RICHTER IS FIANCE

Met While She Was In Canteen Work and He in Naval Reserve—Relatives Silent as to Plans.

Miss Juliet Breitung, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward N. Breitung, who obtained a divorce last March in Reno, Nev., from Max Frederick Kleist, after a secret marriage in 1913, is to marry again. Her fiancé is Herbert Richter, 23 years old, of East Williston, L. I.

The couple visited the Municipal Building yesterday and obtained their license to wed, where it was stated that the wedding was to take place today.

Much secrecy on the part of the relatives of the couple followed their visit to the marriage license bureau, and no formal announcement has been made by Miss Breitung's family regarding the wedding. Both Mr. and Mrs. Breitung, who reside at 16 East Seventy-sixth Street, were said by the servants to be out of town.

Mr. Richter was formerly a student at the University of Pennsylvania, and has just been mustered out of the Naval Reserve. His parents are well-to-do, and live at East Williston, his father being a former hotel man. Mrs. Edward Skou of East Williston is his sister. His family would make no statement regarding his marriage, referring all inquiries to young Mr. Richter, who was said to be somewhere in New York. Last Sunday, it is said, Miss Breitung was a guest at their home.

Miss Breitung's first marriage remained a secret for four months, and was denied by the family when the first account of it was published in the newspapers. Some days afterward it was admitted that the report was correct. It was on Nov. 22, 1913, that Miss Breitung, who lived with her parents at the Hotel St. Regis, and Max F. Kleist of 626 Lexington Avenue, who was a former gardener on an estate adjoining the country home of the Breitungs at Marquette, Mich., obtained a marriage license, and were married by the Rev. Dr. Charles Lewis Slattery of Grace Church.

Owing to the prominence of the Breitung family, the marriage and its subsequent developments attracted considerable attention. Edward Breitung is a banker and ship owner, with offices at 11 Pine Street, and Mrs. Breitung is prominent socially. During the war she has been active in relief work and presented an X-ray ambulance to General Pershing last Christmas. Her daughter has been engaged in canteen work, and it was stated yesterday that she first met Mr. Richter while in service in this work.

Young Kleist, after he and his wife had separated, sued his father-in-law for $250,000 for alienation of affections. The case was tried in the Federal District Court, where the former Mrs. Kleist's romantic love letters were read aloud in court. It was about this time that Miss Breitung declared, in an interview, that while her letters showed that she was infatuated with young Kleist, many things had happened to convince her that he did not love her and that she really was not in love with him. "I soon realized," she said, "that we had done wrong in getting married secretly."

The suit was dismissed, and in April, 1916, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals held that Kleist had no basis for action. Since that time he has dropped from sight.

FAVORS AETNA SETTLEMENT

Committee Accepts Financial Plan for Explosives Company.

The Aetna Explosives Company probably will shortly be taken out of the control of Receivers Holt and Odell and restored to its owners. This was indicated yesterday when the six members of the Adjustment Committee consented to accept a plan of agreement suggested by Federal Judge Mayer, or to advise their clients to accept it. The plan is to place a value of 85 on the bonds and of 80 on the preferred stock, the holders of the stock to receive 5 per cent. in cash and 75 per cent. convertible into bonds. They will also receive 15% per cent. in back dividends, which would bring their cash payments to 20%.

A tentative plan suggested by Judge Mayer last week was to give the bondholders the alternative of payment in cash at 90 or letting the bonds remain at 100, the principal to be paid in twelve annual payments. This plan was discussed by the committee, but it failed to bring the opposing interests together. But it did succeed in harmonizing them sufficiently to make it probable that the modification will soon set the concern going again under its own management.

The committee will meet again today, and tomorrow will report to Judge Mayer whether the new plan will stand. The stumbling block is the value set on the preferred stock, some of the committee believing it is too high.

FALL OF A BERLIN CROESUS.

Stempel, Ex-Peddler, Backed for $1,500,000 by Embezzling Banker.

By Wireless to The New York Times.

BERLIN, (via Copenhagen,) Dec. 9.—The announcement that Alfred Stempel had decided to sell his racehorses has been followed by sensational developments. Stempel, who is about 22 years old, was before the war peddling soap and perfumes. Since then he has developed into a war millionaire, making money in a variety of ways by means, so it is said, of funds furnished by an unknown benefactor. Stempel suddenly appeared a racing celebrity, his horses winning many valuable purses. Only a few months ago he bought up one of the most famous Munich stables.

The Lokal-Anzeiger the other day said that the money for Stempel's various enterprises had been furnished by the manager of one of the most famous Berlin banks, who had taken it without the firm's knowledge; and now that the Stempel concern has collapsed, the bank finds that the manager took 6,000,000 marks.

Richard Gehricke, who supplied Stempel with his funds and is now in police custody, was for forty years employed in the Bleichroeder bank, where he had charge of all deposits. He has confessed that he gave most of the stolen money to Stempel. The latter has sought refuge in a sanatorium for nervous diseases. By seizing the latter's possessions the bank hopes to reduce its losses to 3,000,000 marks.

MRS. SINGER DIVORCED.

Wife of New Yorker Obtains Decree from French Court.

PARIS, Dec. 10.—Mrs. Paris Singer, wife of Paris Singer of New York, today obtained a divorce from her husband.

Paris Singer inherited from his father, Isaac Merritt Singer, a fortune made in manufacturing sewing machines, and after taking an active part for several years in the management of the factories he spent part of his time in England and France. While he was in Paris in 1912 he decided to devote part of his fortune to the establishment of a medical research institute in the French capital. The gift of this institute to France was his method of celebrating his silver wedding anniversary, he announced. It is said that little progress was made in his plans, however.

Mr. Singer owned real estate in this city and Pittsburgh, one of his properties being the Singer Building. In 1917 it was reported that he was trying to buy Madison Square Garden to establish a school and museum of dancing, painting, and other arts.

Established 1839

Announce—that they have assembled at 177 Broadway, in their newly equipped shop, the finest stock of LUGGAGE ever offered to the American public, and that a similar stock will be found in their shop at 14 West 40th Street.

At these shops the requirements of the most exacting may be supplied. There are Wardrobe, Steamer and standard types of TRUNKS, HAT BOXES and CASES, SUIT CASES and HAND BAGS, both fitted and unfitted, KIT BAGS, PORTFOLIOS and many other specially designed articles of traveling equipment.

Since the year 1839 the name and trade mark of CROUCH & FITZGERALD have marked the highest quality of LUGGAGE made in the United States. The best leather, the best frames, the best fittings and the best workmen have always been used.

In every hundred hides tanned, one or two are markedly superior to the others, because of the better condition of the animals, or because of some peculiarly favorable influences after removal. Such hides are usually thicker, and invariably promise greater wear. CROUCH & FITZGERALD have made it a rule to be ready to purchase these superior hides at a premium wherever they may be found.

Every high class workman in LUGGAGE knows there is a position for him with CROUCH & FITZGERALD at any time he wishes to apply for it. All of the hardware used by CROUCH & FITZGERALD is materially heavier than that current in LUGGAGE manufacture, and most of it is manufactured especially for CROUCH & FITZGERALD. No economies are attempted that involve weakening the construction or lessening the wear.

The cost of manufacture is kept down by efficiency in production.

No attempt is made to produce any article at a fixed price. Each piece of LUGGAGE is made to conform to the unvarying CROUCH & FITZGERALD standard of quality, and the selling price is based solely upon the cost of producing this best possible article.

Crouch & Fitzgerald LUGGAGE that has been continuously in use for twenty-five years is still widely owned and used, and other CROUCH & FITZGERALD pieces used for more than fifty years are still in a condition to give substantial service. Every piece sold is guaranteed for continuous service indefinitely, and unusual violence results only in the breakage of some small and unimportant part, easily replaced or repaired.

We Invite all those who delight in fine craftsmanship to visit the CROUCH & FITZGERALD shops at 177 Broadway and 14 West 40th Street.

JEWISH RELIEF DRIVE PASSES $2,000,000

NON-JEWS AMONG GIVERS

Cable from Holland Tells of Pillage and Murders in Lemburg After Polish Conquest.

The Jewish War Relief campaign for $5,000,000 to aid the suffering Jews of Europe passed the $2,000,000 mark yesterday. The reports for the day made by team captains and workers was approximately $205,000. The exact total is now $2,005,840.

Speakers at the meeting in the Hotel Biltmore pointed out that greater energy will be necessary on the part of the workers if the amount is to be raised. Jacob Wertheim said that "the rich slackers" had not contributed enough to the fund. Short speeches were also made by Jacob H. Schiff, Felix M. Warburg, Chairman of the Campaign Committee; William Goldman, Charles S. Ward, and others.

"I will talk plainly and right from the shoulder," said Mr. Wertheim. "The rich slackers have not given enough. Friends have come to me and have said that something drastic is necessary if we are to succeed. We will not go over the top until you workers makes efforts such as you have never before made. I know of people who have given $5,000 who should give $20,000. We will get the poor man's money. There is no question of that. It is up to the big men to give, and I am sorry to say that many of them are slacking in the campaign."

Schiff Expects Speeding Up.

Mr. Schiff felt certain that from today the campaign would pick up. He announced that he had received two voluntary contributions, one for $5,000 from Mrs. E. H. Harriman and one for $1,000 from Cecilia G. Wyckoff of The Wall Street Magazine. "The interest is only developing," he said, "even among non-Jews. With a stimulus the goal will be reached Monday night. But we must bestir ourselves. People will not bring the money to us. People say they are tired of giving. Are any of them as tired as the sufferers for whom this fund is being raised?"

Mr. Ward, who was associated with the United War Work drive, did not share Mr. Wertheim's doubt as to the success of the campaign. Although only $3,500,000 was allotted to the Jewish Welfare Board in the recent United drive, he said that Jews gave a good many times that amount and did a good deal more than they were asked to do. He appealed to the workers to do their full duty, and expressed the hope that non-Jews would also contribute to the campaign.

Mr. Ward read the following letter from Dr. John R. Mott, Director General of the United War Work campaign:

(Incorporated.)

Dec. 10, 1918.

My dear Mr. Warburg—It has been with very great satisfaction that I have been privileged to work with prominent Jews in connection with the United War Work Campaign, to which those of this faith not only gave with the utmost liberality of their money, and without thought of religious differentiation, but gave also equally of their time and strength. They have done the same in every patriotic undertaking since the commencement of the war. The effort which they, under your leadership, are now about to make, to raise $5,000,000 for the Jewish civilian populations in the war zones, is one that cannot but commend itself to all who are lovers of humanity. The United War Work Campaign was in behalf of our soldiers, and, of course, had no relation to the very terrible condition, the awful misery, confronting the Jews in all parts of the world where the war has stretched its devastating hand.

In undertaking this very large task—the task of raising from a fraction of the community, from among their own, $5,000,000 within a week—the Jews of New York City are living up to the traditions of their faith and to the ideals they have ever set for themselves, that of taking care of their own. That they will succeed I have no doubt, and that the community at large will aid in the effort I am equally convinced, for the Jews of New York have not only never been recreant to the duty imposed upon them to see that their own, both here and elsewhere, are cared for, but they have likewise ever been glad to respond to any appeal which has been made to them, either in behalf of humanity, no matter of what race or creed, or of the call of our country.

Very sincerely yours,
J. R. MOTT.

That Jews in poor circumstances are doing their share in the drive, was evidenced, the committee said, by a message from the girls living in the dormitory of the Young Women's Hebrew Association, announcing a contribution of $2,000 which they had gathered in nickels and dimes for the purpose of buying an ambulance but which, upon the signing of the armistice, they determined to turn over to the Jewish War Relief campaign. The children of the Hebrew Orphan Asylum contributed $25.

Two $10,000 Subscriptions.

A gift of $10,000 was made by Adolph Lewisohn, and it was announced that Adolph S. Ochs of THE NEW YORK TIMES had increased his subscription from $5,000 to $10,000. Mrs. William Randolph Hearst gave $1,000. The firm of M. Lissner & Co. announced a 100 per cent. record for its employes.

The following cable, received yesterday from the Holland branch of the Joint Distribution Committee, was read at the meeting:

Following report just received from Judischer Nationalrat, Vienna:

"Reliable eye witnesses report indescribable acts occurring after Polish conquest of Lemberg. Legionaires marched through Jewish quarters in double file under command of officers and pillaged systematically; broke into business houses with bayonets and hand grenades, surrounded homes and burned them down. Individual Jews trying to save themselves by jumping out of windows were shot by Legionaires. About 10,000 Jews without shelter. Eighty per cent. of Lemberg's Jewry ruined.

"Eighty Jewish houses razed to the ground; 600 Jews killed, of whom forty charred bodies were found. Pogrom lasted contiuously from Friday morning until Sunday noon, after departure of Ruthenians Friday morning. The fact is established that permission had been given in advance to pillage for forty-eight hours; at end of that time martial court proclaimed. Jewish deputation appeared before Polish Chairman Dr. Adam and State President Dr. Stenchelotis on Friday morning, but absolutely without success. During conflagration water supply shut off. Three synagogues destroyed. Desperate cry for help. Do everything; leave no stone unturned, as further spread of pogroms will surely follow Polish advance. KENN."

Chaplain David Tannenbaum of the Jewish Welfare Board, in a letter to Dr. Cyrus Adler, Chairman of the board's Committee on Chaplains, said that the Jewish men in the division to which he was attached made a good record, for the deaths of Jews in the division form 9 per cent. of the total in the division, while the Jewish soldiers formed only 6¼ per cent. of the total strength. Chaplain E. N. Rabinowitz wrote that in the camp to which he was attached there was a considerable number of Jewish soldiers whose soldierly qualities were highly praised by their officers.

The first of a series of Yiddish concerts will be held tonight at the Jewish Welfare canteen in Seward Park. On the program are Abraham Raisin, a poet; Henriette Schnitzer, A. Fishkind, Esther Neraslaiskia and Leon Rosenstein.

CALLS FOR SHELL INQUIRY.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Asserting that the Government appeared to have made a "collosal failure" of its effort to supply ammunition to the army in France, Senator Poindexter, Republican, of Washington offered a resolution today callinig for an immediate investigation of the Ordnance Bureau and the Quartermaster General's Department. The Senator also wants to know whether "'any failure to procure adequte supplies" was due to the activities of German agents.

Senator Poindexter quoted from a newpaper a statement that the entire shipment of three-inch shells sent from the United States to France during the whole period America was in the war was only about 3,000,000 in number. This, it was stated, would not have met the military requirements for a single month.

STETTINIUS IS RETURNING.

To Discuss Plans for Winding Up A. E. F. Business in France.

PARIS, Dec. 9.—Edward R. Stettinius, representative of the United States War Department, who supervised the large purchases in Europe for the American Expeditionary Force, and who, since the armistice, has been engaged in the task of transforming its activities from a war to a peace basis, will sail Saturday for America. After conferring with Secretary Baker at Washington, Mr. Stettinius will return here in the middle of January.

Mr. Stettinius is going back to the United States to discuss plans for the liquidation of the business of the American Expeditionary Force and for disposing of its property on the most advantageous terms possible.

Immediately after the signing of the armistice orders were given suspending the construction of buildings, docks, trackage, &c., and on Nov. 14 specific orders were issued discontinuing practically all projects of construction, suspending all purchases and directing the cancellation of purchase orders and contracts so far as possible.

CAPT. GEO. COLDEWAY KILLED IN ACTION

Was a Veteran of the Old Sixty-ninth and Was Serving with That Organization in France.

Capt. George Coldeway, killed in action, was a veteran of the 69th New York Infantry and was serving in the 165th Infantry of the Rainbow Division. He was assigned to the Officers' Training Camp at Fort Myer a few months after the United States entered the war, and then served as an instructor at Camp Lee. He was an instructor in France and then was assigned to his old regiment. Before the war he was Treasurer of the Kinder & Collins Company, manufacturers of pianos at 520 West Forty-eighth Street. His wife lives at 544 West Eighty-third Street.

Capt. Howard L. Satterlee, dead of disease, was an architect before the war. He was a graduate of the Columbia School of Architecture and later studied at the Paris Ecole Nationale et Speciale des Beaux Arts. Among his works were the chapel for the Zion Church, the McKinley memorial at Hamburg, N. Y., and the Little Sanctuary and All Hallows Gate at the Cathedral in Washington. He lived in this city.

Lieut. Ernest W. Woodruff, severely wounded, was graduated from the Civil Engineering Department of Columbia University in 1912, and then became a member of the engineers' staff of the Municipal Bureau of Highways. He served with Squadron A on the Mexican border, attended the officers' school at Madison Barracks and was assigned to the 309th Machine Gun Battalion. His home was at 67 Radford Street, Yonkers.

Lieut. Charles P. Porter, wounded, was a member of the 1st Pursuit Group, Aviation Section, and is a son of Mrs. Charles S. Porter, member of the New Rochelle Board of Education. For an exploit in the Verdun sector he received the Distinguished Service Cross with an oak leaf.

Lieut. James Valentine, Jr., who was reported missing after his airplane was downed, is now reported severely wounded. His father, James Valentine of Glen Ridge, N. J., has received word that his son was in a hospital at Rouen and that his leg had been amputated.

Sergt. Frederick J. Conway, killed, of the Supply Company of the 165th Infantry was a Spanish war veteran, and served on the Mexican border with the 23d New York Infantry. He lived at 784 St. John's Place, Brooklyn.

Sergt. Harold E. Bockelman, killed, with the 106th Infantry, served on the Mexican border in the 14th New York Infantry. His home was at 336 Fourteenth Street, Brooklyn.

Sergt. Victor Standerman, killed, also was in the 106th Infantry and was in the 23d New York Infantry before that unit was reorganized. He was an actor and lived at 1,322 Halsey Street, Brooklyn.

Herbert L. Armstrong, dead of wounds, was serving with Co. E, 59th Infantry, when he was injured in September. He was a brother of ex-Assemblyman Perry M. Armstrong and lived with his mother, Mrs. J. W. Armstrong at 200 Claremont Avenue.

Corporal Joseph Henry, killed in action on Nov. 11, a few hours before the armistice was signed, enlisted in the regular army when he was 18 years of age and served on the Mexican border and in France with the 6th Field Artillery. He lived with his aunt, Mrs. Thomas W. Heather at 11 Union Street, Flushing.

Albert A. Justice, dead of wounds, was a member of the Police Department before he enlisted in the 109th Infantry of the 28th Division. He lived in Richmond Hill.

Corporal Thomas Fitzgerald, killed in action, was a member of the 47th Company, 5th Regiment of Marines, and lived at 4 West 104th Street. He was wounded in July, but went back to the front in October.

Lieutenant Joseph E. Burchill, killed on Oct. 8, was in the 306th Machine Gun Company, and before the war lived with his parents at 31 West Ninety-second Street. He was a member of the first detachment of officers sent from the Plattsburg camp to take instruction with the French in hand grenade throwing.

BRITAIN QUERIED WESTERN UNION ALSO

President Carlton Thinks Cable Request Is Only So as to Meet Any Changes.

SEVEN LINES INTERRUPTED

Commercial Cable Company Repeats Warning That Burleson Will Lead to Foreign Complications.

Newcomb Carlton, President of the Western Union, said yesterday that his company had also been requested by a department of the British Government to submit to it any changes undertaken by Postmaster General Burleson in his control of the cables. Mr. Carlton said, however, that he placed a different interpretation upon the request than had the Commercial Cable Company officials. He said he thought that it was merely the desire of the British authorities to be informed in advance of any radical changes, so that they could adjust affairs to meet a new situation.

Seven of the seventeen cables connecting the United States with Europe are out of commission, and some time is likely to elapse before cable facilities are restored to normal. This was stated yesterday by William J. Deegan, Secretary of the Mackay Companies, the controlling corporation of the Commercial Cable Company. Four of the lines not in use are British cables leased by the Western Union; one is the French line running between Cape Cod and Brest, and the others are the British and French cables which were formerly operated by the German Cable Company and connected New York directly with Emden via the Azores.

All of the Commercial's five cables, according to Mr. Deegan, are in good shape and are being operated at capacity. It was said that the Western Union lines had been out of commission "for months," and that the cables apparently had broken in midocean. The Western Union cableship Lord Kelvin has been dispatched to fish up the lines and make repairs. George G. Ward, Vice President and General Manager of the Commercial Cable Company, made the following statement yesterday:

"The information from England and Canada that those Governments apparently are not looking very kindly on the attempt of the American Postmaster General to control not only the cables in this country but also those abroad, has called serious attention to the fact that the United States may find itself the loser in the matter of cable communication with Europe if Mr. Burleson persists in his policy.

"At present all Atlantic cables between the United States, Canada, and Great Britain are under American control. The Commercial Cable Company, an American corporation, owns five cables, and the Western Union, also an American corporation, while it owns no cables, leases eight cables between the United States and Great Britain, six of which are British owned. The United States, under private control, has been in a predominating position by reason of this American ownership and control, and the British Government, in common with other Governments, has been content to allow foreign corporations to make landings on their shores because foreign corporations may be regulated by the Governments without disturbing the relations between Governments. But when the Postmaster General of the United States announces that he has taken possession, control, and operation of transatlantic cables landing in Great Britain, which includes those leased from British companies, then it would not be surprising if the British and Canadian Governments begin to view askance an attempt to extend the powers of the United States Government to the very shores of Great Britain and Canada.

"The advocacy by Mr. Vail of the unification of the cable and telegraph systems under one management is easily understood. This idea undoubtedly formed the basis of his plans eight years ago when he obtained control of the Western Union Telegraph system and by means of it compelled the two British cable companies to lease their properties to the Western Union and retire. He probably would have liked to obtain control of both the Postal Telegraph land line system and the Commercial Cable system, but this could not be done, and so monopolistic methods were introduced with a view to destroying our competition or making it ineffective.

"He is mistaken in stating that the unification—in other words, combination—of the telegraph and cable systems would receive the approval of the public. If Mr. Vail is viewing the question only from the standpoint of temporary control during the present situation he must know that the congestion of traffic is due to no cause which could be overcome by unification or combination. The enormous demands made upon the cable service by the Government, coupled with cable interruptions, have kept the cables fully occupied for twenty-four hours every day. Whether those cables were operated under one control or not, it would be impossible to add to their capacity."

A new chapter was written yesterday in the history of the alias subpoena which Charles E. Hughes and William W. Cook, counsel for the Commercial Cable Company, obtained for service on Mr. Burleson. For six days the subpoena has been held by Marshal McCarthy, awaiting an opportunity to hand it to the Postmaster General. Yesterday, somehow, a tip was received that Mr. Burleson was registered at the Hotel McAlpin. McCarthy immediately sent a process server there, but he soon returned with the statement that Mr. Burleson wasn't there.

BRITAIN HAS RIGHT TO TAKE CABLES, TOO

Burleson Will Not Discuss Her Reported Protest Against Seizure of Commercial Lines.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Postmaster General Burleson would say nothing today about the reported protest by Great Britain against the taking over of the cables by the American Government and no official of the department would talk for publication. No admission could be obtained that a protest had been made, but it was said that if one had been filed, this would constitute "a delicate diplomatic situation," and there were hints that the matter would have to be adjusted by the State Department, during which time, the Post Office Department, and particularly the Cables Committee, would remain entirely silent.

As far as can be ascertained the department takes the attitude that this Government is pursuing, what it considers, the same course in regard to cable regulation to which Great Britain is said to have the right. Leases by English cable companies to certain American cable companies secure landing rights for these companies, and in 1914, such landing rights contained the following as an article:

"If and whenever in the opinion of one of his Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, an emergency shall have arisen in which it is expedient for the public service that his Majesty's Government shall have control over the transmission of messages by the cables hereby licensed it shall be lawful for the said Secretary of State by warrant under his hand to direct and cause so much of the works of the two companies, or either of them, as are within the United Kingdom or the territorial waters thereof, or any part of such works to be taken possession of in the name and on behalf of his Majesty and to be used for his Majesty's service and subjects thereto for such ordinary service as to the said Secretary of State may seem fit, and in that event any person authorized by the said Secretary of State may enter upon the offices and works of the two companies, or either of them, or on any part of such works and take possession thereof and use the same as aforesaid."

It was intimated that while this establishes a potential right to take over the cables, it is as strong as the right which the United States has actually put into effect.

No comment was obtainable when the question was asked at the Post Office Department: "What would happen if Canada tried to seize the cable landing of the Commercial Company?"

It is understood, however, that the Post Office Department feels that, while a Government could do what it desires, and that Canada might actually be able to seize the landings, still the original contracts the cable companies made for landings, warehouses, ground space, &c., would hold in the courts, and would be carried out. One suggestion made was that any protest by England should be not against the actual taking over of the cables, but against the original act passed by Congress which authorized control of the cables. It is argued that the Post Office Department is only executing the powers conferred upon it.

When the question was asked if the Postmaster General would accept service in New York City, in the Mackay suits, an official said that the proper place to serve papers would be in Washington, where the Postmaster General is stationed.

PFALZ INCLINES TO ALLIES.

Bavarians of the Rhine Province Show Hostility to Prussia.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY OF OCCUPATION, Kaiserslautern, Bavaria, Dec. 7, (Associated Press.)—The exact significance of the apparent resignation of the people of this invaded district at the presence of foreign troops cannot be measured today, but there are certain manifestations of fear that a heavy burden may fall upon the Rhenish provinces unless they separate from Germany, and also of growing animosity toward Berlin.

The Bavarians of the Palatinate [German, Pfalz] are in a large majority hostile to any further connection with Prussia. Some of them declare that the Rhine should be the new frontier. There also are suggestions that State-owned property, such as the coal fields in the valley of the Sarre, would pay the share of the Rhenish province of the Palatinate in the bill that the Allies may present to Germany.

Business men in Saarbrücken and Saarlouis today dwelt upon the advantages of closer commercial relations between the Rhenish provinces and Alsace-Lorraine and France, and did not conceal their apprehension of economic disaster if the military occupation should obstruct commerce across the Rhine.

TIME FOR GERMANS TO GIVE UP ENGINES

PRINCE MAX STIRRED

Quoted as Condemning the "Unheard-Of Oppression" of the Victorious Allies.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 9.—The Lokal-Anzeiger of Berlin says it learns from competent sources that Marshal Foch has agreed to postpone the date for the surrender of all the required German locomotives until Feb. 1.

Prince Maximilian of Baden, former Imperial German Chancellor, has issued a statement in which he refers to "the unheard-of oppression which the enemy's lust for revenge and fever of victory has inflicted upon our Fatherland," according to a Berlin news agency telegram to the Dutch newspapers. "By the imposition of humiliating armistice conditions," the ex-Chancellor declares, Germany's enemies are "menacing the foundations of our national life."

Prince Maximilian urges that President Wilson bear in mind "his given word" regarding a just peace and a League of Nations.

PARIS, Dec. 10.—Reports from Saarbruck, Rhenish Prussia, indicate that the delivery of German railway material is being carried out very slowly, but without open objection by the Germans.

They tried at first to pass off worn-out French railway cars, but the commission which was receiving the material was strict in its examinations and accepted only two or three cars out of every ten. The French authorities are all the more severe in this connection as it is declared they have proof that the Germans during the war built numbers of cars which they held in preparation for a proposed economic invasion to follow the expected German victory.

HEYDLER TO LEAD NATIONAL LEAGUE

Popular Baseball Official Is Elected President for Term of Three Years.

MITCHELL DENIED A SEAT

New Cub Executive Not Allowed at Meeting of Delegates or at Board.

John A. Heydler was elected President of the National League yesterday for a term of three years at the annual meeting of the organization at the Waldorf-Astoria. Mr. Heydler will also serve as Secretary and Treasurer, positions he has held in the league for a number of years.

Mr. Heydler's election came as a surprise. The club owners were believed to have agreed on John Conway Toole for President. Mr. Toole, who has acted for the league in a legal capacity during the Federal League war, had been led to believe that the majority of the club owners favored his candidacy and he went to the Waldorf yesterday at the request of the club owners.

As baseball in its present unsettled condition needs a practical baseball man, the club owners agreed on Heydler. He served out the unfinished term of Harry Pulliam in 1900, and is one of the best versed men connected with the game. Mr. Heydler was a baseball reporter on The Washington Star in 1894. In that same year he was appointed a substitute umpire in the National League by the late Nick Young.

In 1898, Mr. Heydler was appointed as a regular umpire and he refers to those days as a stormy period in his life. This was the first year of the double umpire system. One year of umpiring was enough, and he was on The Washington Post in 1903, when Harry Pulliam, then President of the National League, appointed him his private secretary. In 1907, the office of Secretary-Treasurer was created and Mr. Heydler was appointed to the place under President Pulliam. When Mr. Pulliam died in 1909 Mr. Heydler was elected for the unfinished term. In the Fall of 1909 Heydler was succeeded by Tom Lynch. The new President of the National League is 49 years old and was born in Lafargeville, N. Y.

The National League amended its constitution in relation to the Board of Directors which is now made up of the Presidents of the eight clubs. The new board is made up of four members with the President as the fifth member, whose vote will be decisive in the case of a tie. The new board consists of Harry N. Hempstead of New York, Charles H. Ebbets of Brooklyn, August Herrmann of Cincinnati, and William F. Baker of Philadelphia.

Fred Mitchell, the newly elected President of the Chicago Cubs, was denied a place at the league meeting because of his connection with the club as manager. William Veeck, Vice President and Secretary of the Cubs, a former Chicago newspaper man, was received as a qualified delegate and took part in both the proceedings of the Board of Directors and the league meeting.

Mr. Heydler in submitting his annual report briefly reviewed the unsettled conditions brought about by the war and urged the club owners to reconstruct for the future as soon as possible.

Mr. Heydler, in his report, said:

"Our problems are not of the game itself—for that is in good favor here and wherever our soldiers and sailors have taken it. Put in concentrated form, our real problems consist of placing the business end of the game on a business basis. Every club in a championship race, and representing, as it does, one of eight big communities, should have a chance to make a profit.

"There is no reason why a big stride toward this end should not be made at this particular time; for all the essentials required are unity of action by and with all governing baseball bodies.

"This league has always been ready to consider projects looking to the good of the game. It believes strongly and wholeheartedly in the national agreement that binds the great baseball organizations for a common good; but it also believes that well-considered suggestions or appeals coming from either party to the agreement shall be entitled to and demand a respectful hearing from all.

"Emerging, as we are, from a five-year blight of baseball war and world's war, it is but natural that the financial strain should have been severe. The wonder is that the organization itself survived, and that its circuit remains unshaken and intact. This is a matter of congratulation, not only for this league, but for all others that weathered this unparalleled period.

"Now, with the return to normal conditions, comes the promise of our clubs taking the field in good playing strength, and of a renewed and undivided public interest in the game. Assuredly the tide has turned. It is for all of us—National Leaguers and American Leaguers, who represent only the big cities from the Atlantic to the Mississippi, and the minor leaguers, who speak for all the rest of this great country, as well as for our Canadian friends, to get together, take advantage of favoring conditions, and start the baseball craft in the right direction."

PAT MORAN RELEASED.

Manager of Phillies Loses Job, Despite Remarkable Record.

Pat Moran, who has been manager of the Philadelphia Club for four years, was unconditionally released by President William F. Baker yesterday. The removal of Moran was the sensational development of the National League conclave at the Waldorf. Since Moran took charge of the Phillies in 1915 he has made a remarkable record. He won the pennant in 1915, and finished in second place on two other occasions. Moran accomplished these results without expending any money for new talent.

Although President Baker refused to say who would succeed Moran as manager, it was stated that Jack Coombs of Brooklyn would be the man. Coombs has been in this city for the last few days in consultation with Baker and President Ebbets of Brooklyn. It is not believed that there will be any difficulty about Coombs getting his release from Brooklyn. He is a popular figure in Philadelphia because of his former connection with the Athletics.

FRAZEE AFTER JOHNSON.

Boston Owner Would Oust American League President from Commission.

Harry H. Frazee, President of the Boston Red Sox, left here last night for Chicago, where he will attend the American League meeting tomorrow. Frazee before leaving the Waldorf where the National League is in attendance, did not hesitate to say that he expected to engage in a verbal battle with Ban Johnson.

Frazee is strongly opposed to the American League President as a member of the National Commission, and he is going to make a fight at the meeting for a one-man commission. It was Frazee, with President Hampstead of the Giants, who proposed William H. Taft for a one-man commission.

There was much talk yesterday among the club owners about the possibility of Judge K. M. Landis of Chicago as Chairman of the National Commission to succeed August Herrmann of Cincinnati. Judge Landis has not been approached on the subject, but he is thoroughly familiar with the game, and is an ardent fan. The Chicago officials who are at the meeting here said they believed that Judge Landis could be induced to accept the place if the two leagues joined in the request.

FULTZ MAY HEAD LEAGUE.

New International Seeks Him to Enforce Demands on Majors.

Lieutenant David L. Fultz, who is now stationed at the aviation camp at Mineola, will be asked to accept the office of President of the new International League to replace John H. Farrell, who resigned. Fultz, who was formerly President of the Players Fraternity, was also a major league player several seasons ago, and is a practical baseball man.

The new International League was in session all day yesterday with the members of the old organization, and much of the unfinished buiness left over from the last season was settled. There are still many financial matters to be attended to.

Little business of a definite nature was done about next season, because the organization is waiting to see what action the major leagues will take concerning the minors. The minors expect to make some forceful demands on the major leagues, and it is for this reason that Fultz has been asked to serve as President. He is a lawyer and is familiar with all the legal angles of the game.

The International League is still smarting under the radical action of the National Commission last season, when it declared all the International League players free agents. Charles T. Chapin of Rochester is at the head of the revolutionary forces of the league, and plans to carry the fight of the minors to the Commission as soon as they make their plans known.

TENNIS CLUB NOMINATES.

Candidates for Coming Year at West Side Club Named.

William Alexander Campbell, Secretary of the West Side Tennis Club, has announced the report of the Nominating Committee as follows: President, Charles Scott Landers; Vice President, Marshall S. Hagar; Treasurer, Hugh C. Guiler; Secretary, William Alexander Campbell; Captain, W. J. Gallon; Governors, Theodore Hetzler, Clarence G. Heylmun, Waldo D. Hadsell, Stuart Johnson; Nominating Committee, 1919, L. J. Carruthers, Chairman; Charles W. MacMullen, Ernest W. Mecabe, Hugh L. Nehrling, Otis Smith.

The committee for 1918 which made the foregoing nominations included the following: C. W. Kress, Chairman; R. B. Gatcomb, Dimon Roberts, W. C. Worth. The annual meeting of the club will be held on Jan. 17.

Columbia Midgets Triumph.

Columbia Grammar School's midget basket ball quintet defeated the Berkeley-Irving midgets in an interesting game yesterday on the Columbia Grammar court by a score of 23 to 16. The first half of the contest was keenly played and ended with the teams deadlocked with 7 points each. A superior offensive in the second half gave the Columbia Grammar lads the victory.

TITLE GOLF MEETS WILL BE RESUMED

Amateur, Open, and Junior Tournaments to be Played.

Championship and invitation tournaments, the more the merrier, will be the slogan of the Metropolitan Golf Association next season. At the annual meeting, held late yesterday afternoon at the office of Cornelius J. Sullivan, the President, 61 Broadway, the vote was unanimous in favor of a resumption of competitions.

Furthermore, the same clubs that had been selected for the 1917 championships are still in line, and, as no other requests were received, they undoubtedly will be selected. This means that the amateur will go to the Brooklawn Country Club, the open to the North Shore Country Club, and the junior to the Siwanoy Country Club.

When the chair called the attention of the delegates to the question of championships S. D. Lounsbery, the Plainfield Country Club representative, urged the association to take the initiative by going into the competitive end stronger than ever. He made a motion that not only the championships be resumed, as usual, but that everything possible be done to encourage invitation meetings. This met with the unanimous approval of the delegates.

C. G. Waldo then renewed the application of the Brooklawn Country Club for the amateur, while Julian Hess did the same on behalf of the North Shore for the open. John G. Anderson added that Siwanoy would be pleased to have the youngsters.

The accounts showed that a war fund total of $71,877.71 had been contributed by the association in the last two years, as follows: American Red Cross, $60,000; Y. M. C. A., $3,950; Knights of Columbus, $3,950, and War Camp Community Service, $3,950.

Four clubs were elected to membership since December, 1917—the Lido Golf Club, the Mount Vernon Country Club, the St. Albans Golf Club, and the Shackamaxon Country Club, while the Powelton Club of Newburg resigned. This leaves a membership of eighty-eight clubs at present.

Tennis Tourney Ends.

PINEHURST, N. C., Dec. 10.—Both the women's singles and the men's singles were finished off at today's session of the St. Thomas tennis tournament at Pinehurst. C. F. Watson, Jr., of the Westchester Country Club, won the men's trophy by defeating Lucius Wilmerding Jr., of Tuxedo in two straight sets, 6—1, 6—2. The women's singles went to Mrs. Frank H. Godfrey of Longwood, who defeated Miss Caroline Bogart of Pinehurst in the final contest.

BOXING CHAMPION IS SUED.

Former Managers Seek to Recover on Willard Contract.

Tom Jones of Chicago and Jack Curley, local wrestling promoter, who formerly acted as managers of Jess Willard, world's heavyweight boxing champion, yesterday began suit against the title holder in the Supreme Court. The action came up before Justice Lehman. Jones and Curley are seeking to recover $25,000 for alleged breach of contract. The former managers contend that Willard entered into a contract with them whereby the title holder was to give Jones and Curley 20 per cent. of all his earnings from exhibitions for a period extending over three years. This contract, the plaintiffs allege, was made in 1915. It is charged that Willard lived up to the contract for exactly two years and nine months.

PEARSE HEADS ROWERS.

Nonpareil Club Elects Officers for Ensuing Year.

George A. Pearse has been elected President of the Nonpareil Rowing Club for the ensuing year, according to an announcement made yesterday. Frank P. Crowley was selected for the office of Vice President and G. J. Roth for Treasurer. The other officers elected were: Financial Secretary, James T. Coughlin; Recording Secretary, Joseph A. McLoughlin; Captain, Charles C. Hoffman; Lieutenants, R. H. Pearse, H. P. O'Dea, and John C. Steuer; Pleasure Lieutenant, C. H. Steinkamp; Chairman House Committee, H. H. Michaels; Trustee for three years, John J. Kraft.

Because of the war the activities of the Nonpareil Club have been curtailed. The boathouse throughout the last season, therefore, has been comparatively quiet. With the end of hostilities and the return home of the nation's fighters an elaborate resumption of sport is planned by the officials of the organization. Sixty-five per cent. of the club's membership answered the call to war. A series of welcoming receptions are now being arranged for the returned heroes, and there is every indication that increased interest will be shown in the rowing sport on the Harlem next season.

LOW DEFEATS SERVATIUS.

Triumphs in First Game of Local Cue Tourney.

John Low scored over Louis Servatius last night in the opening game of the tournament which will decide the metropolitan Class A 18.2 balk line billiard championship, at the Broadway Academy. Low won by 150 to 90. The winner finished his string in thirty innings for an average of 5. He had a high run of 25. Servatius made a high run of 24 and an average of 3.

Cuelsts in Two Matches.

L. Bassi and F. Griffith were billiard winners last night in two tournaments which are being conducted at Doyle's. Bassi defeated B. Snow in a match at three-cushions, by 25 to 10 in twenty-one innings. Bassi made a high run of four. In an English billiard game Griffith triumphed over E. Moss by 250 to 249.

APPEL AGIAN WINS IN SQUASH TOURNEY

Contestants Reach Semi-Final Round in Handicap Championship.

All semi-final round brackets in the national open handicap squash tennis championship tournament were filled yesterday as a result of the play at the Columbia University Club. Two Harvard Club men, one Princeton Club, and one Yale Club representative remain in the hunt for the laurels. John W. Appel, Jr., of the Harvard Club, will meet Ralph Monks of the Princeton Club today in one match and in the other Ralph. G. Coburn of the Harvard Club is to play E. J. Clapp of the Yale Club.

Appel, Monks, and Coburn advanced in the matches played yesterday while Clapp, triumphed Monday. Appel, who plays from minus ten aces, disposed of A. J. Mittendorf of the Princeton Club, handicapped at plus five aces, with comparative ease, the score being 15—8, 15—7. Appel seems to be nearer top form than any of the contestants in the tournament and against Mittendorf he was especially strong, puzzling the Princeton man with swift drives into the corners.

Coburn had the hardest match of the afternoon. Like Appel he plays from minus ten aces, but unlike Appel, was forced to meet one of the craftiest squash players in the metropolitan district. Fred S. Keeler of the Columbia Club, handicapped at minus five aces, was pitted against Coburn, and the veteran Columbia man, gave his more skilful adversary an argument all the way.

In the first game Keeler was exceptionally strong and ran up a lead of 14—6 before Coburn could gain any advantage at all. At this point Keeler began to tire and Coburn, using a savage attack, which kept the ball spinning around the walls, managed to pull out the game at 17—14. In the second game Coburn even increased his speed and rapidly wore down the veteran player, winning at 15—10.

Ralph Monks, at plus 2, defeated William Adams, Jr., of the Yale Club, also a plus 2 man, in a hotly contested three-game match with the score 15—17, 15—13, 15—10. It was only the greater experience which won for Monks.

The summaries:

National Open Handicap Squash Tennis Championship. — Third round — John W. Appel, Jr., Harvard Club, (minus 10 aces,) defeated A. J. Mittendorf, Princeton Club, (plus 5 aces,) 15—8, 15—7; Ralph Monks, Princeton Club, (plus 2,) defeated William Adams, Jr. Yale Club, (plus 2,) 15—17, 15—13, 15—10; Ralph G. Coburn, Harvard Club, (minus 10,) defeated Fred S. Keeler, Columbia Club, (minus 5,) 17—14, 15—10.

Coleman Loses Again.

Hal B. Coleman suffered his second defeat at the hands of J. S. Druckermiller of Philadelphia, last night in an intercity 18.2 balk line billiard match at Daly's Academy. The score was 300 to 241. Druckermiller required thirty-six innings to complete his string, making an average of 8 12-36, with a nigh run of 58. Coleman's high run was 84, and he averaged 6 31-35. One week ago in a match in Philadelphia Coleman suffered defeat at the hands of Druckermiller. The concluding match of the series will be decided this evening, when Mark Muldaur opposes Clayton Stilz of Philadelphia.

Concannon Leads Greenleaf.

Joseph Concannon, New York State champion, advanced to a lead of 33 points yesterday in his 1,000-point pocket billiards with Ralph Greenleaf, the young Monmouth, Ill., player, at the Rational Billiard Academy in Brooklyn. Concannon displayed excellent form in both afternoon and evening sessions and took both blocks. His total for two days of play is 300 points, while Greenleaf has 267.

TWO WOMEN SHOW NOTABLE SCULPTURE

"Belgium—1914," a Tragic War Work—Victor Higgins's Picture, "Fiesta," Takes Double Honors.

Strong contrasts mark the opening Winter exhibition of the National Academy of Design, which held its varnishing day reception yesterday. The Altman prize of $1,000 for a figure or genre painting by an American artist went to Victor Higgins for the "Fiesta," which also took the Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan medal, with which goes $500. This is an Indian picture, with the clear atmospheric conditions of the Far West and Southwest, which are a feature of it, and these are repeated in a number of pictures of Indians and Western life. They give a note of gayety and brilliance to the exhibition, while in the many war pictures, which are also a feature of the exhibition, the deepest note of tragedy is reached.

An innovation has been attempted in the hanging of the pictures this year, and Will H. Low, John F. Carlson, and Herbert Adams, who are on the Hanging Committee, have placed many of the smaller pictures, which cannot be well seen if hung high, on the line, and the larger pictures which do not lose by a little distance above them. Whether the advantages balance the slightly topheavy effect or serious affect the composition of the entire arrangement there may be different opinions.

There is a wide variety in the war pictures shown. They include symbolic pictures, many portraits, victory memorials, and street parades. One of the latter, "Peace Celebration—Fifth Avenue," a misty mass of people and flags by Robert A. Graham, in the Academy Room is excellent. The two big tragic war pictures are on the west wall of the Vanderbilt Gallery, one symbolic, "Liberators," somewhat ghastly, with a pale, worn figure of the Christ in the centre, by F. Luis Mora, and a forceful "Massacre at Dinant," by George Bellows. The central picture on the rear wall of the Vanderbilt Gallery, which forms the background of the exhibition, is "Tanagra," by Childe Hassam, in intangible, delicate tones, which the deep blues and greens of surrounding pictures like the vivid landscape of Jonas Lie, emphasize and are emphasized by.

Two notable pieces of sculpture are features of the South Gallery, standing one on either side of the centre following the portrait bust of Professor Henry Fairfield Osborn by Chester Beach, which is at one side of the entrance door, and the "Bust of Mrs. W." at the other side. Standing out from all others is the figure which took the Julia A. Shaw Memorial Prize for the most meritorious work of art in the exhibition produced by an American woman. It is a lovely virginal nude figure, "The Future," by Evelyn Beatrice Longman, the life-size figure of a young woman, one delicately molded arm and slender hand outstretched, the other hand resting at the side, under the breast. The head is very charming, the arrangement of the hair unusual, a curl hanging on either side of the face in a manner that is understandingly exactly right. There is a soft expression of wonder on the face. The youth of this young creature is shown by the slenderness of the figure and the bones of the neck not yet rounded over with flesh. It is altogether appealing, charming, and lovely.

"Lodoletto" in Next Week's Operas.

Caruso, Florence Easton, Chalmers, and Didur will add Mascagni's "Lodoletto" to the season's repertory at the Metropolitan next Wednesday evening. Other operas of Mr. Gatti's sixth week are "Marouf," next Monday, with De Luca and Alda; Thursday, "Aïda," Muzio, Homer, Crimi, Montesanto, Mardones; Friday, "Faust," Farrar, Martinelli, Couzinou, Rothier; Saturday matinée, "Forza del Destino," Caruso, Ponselle, and, for the first time, Sophie Braslau, and Saturday evening, "La Bohème," Alda, Romaine, Martinelli, and Scotti.

Herman Sandby Plays with Quartet

Herman Sandby produced an original string quartet at his concert in Aeolian Hall last evening, a musicianly work in C major, and in four movements. These parts bear alternates for the conventional camouflage titles, bracketed with which are the key words "Aspirations," "Reverie," "Danse Fantastique," and "Resolution." The Danish cellist was assisted by Ilya Schkolnik and Frank Gurowitsch, violins, and Herbert Borodkin, viola. Walter Golde accompanied Sandby's solo arrangements from Northern folksongs, as well as a sonata of Locatelli, the Sibelius "Valse Triste," and Norma Neruda's "Berceuse Slave." The concert was a benefit for the war relief work of the Danish Women's Civic League.

Carrie Jacobs Bond Wins Contest.

Carrie Jacobs Bond of Chicago, whose songs have long been sung by Mme. Schumann-Heink and other concert stars, was yesterday announced as winner in a contest to furnish musical setting for William Mill Butler's war poem, "Democracy," as a new national air. Dr. Lee B. Woodcock of Scranton, Penn., was a close second, and among other contestants were a Russian opera composer and two professors of music in American universities. Sigmund Spaeth of the Y. M. C. A. war headquarters here was Chairman of the New York Committee of Judges, whose decision was announced by S. M. Weiss.

MUSIC

By James Gibbons Huneker

The Russian Symphony Orchestra.

Russia is like some giant shadowgraph upon which is projected with incredible velocity vast events—political, social, artistic. Nothing long endures. We have hardly had time to swallow Scriabine when Ornstein appears, and Ornstein only goes out of town to play when Prokofieff looms up on the stormy horizon. As for Rachmaninoff—he is almost a classic. At least his second symphony in E minor, which was played at the first concert of the Russian Symphony Orchestra in Carnegie Hall last night, is serene, sunny, soothing if compared to the productions of the new men. Serge Prokofieff, who was starred on this occasion both as composer and pianist: hadn't we better call him Fortissimist! His pianissimo is seldom in evidence. A Scherzo Humoristique for four bassoons was a success. The humor is subacid, even lugubrious, but humor it is—brief, sardonic, and cleverly expressed. It was well blown by the quartet of bassoonists, who were forced to rise and bow their acknowledgments to the pleased audience; indeed, they narrowly escaped repeating the grotesque trifle. Two of the four wore sailor costumes, which made the atmosphere still more incongruous.

The first piano concerto of Serge Batiushka was in one movement, but compounded of many rhythms and recondite noises. It took twelve minutes to play. It might fairly be called an Etude in Rhythms, for the lyric episode is like an amorous night in June sandwiched between two xylophones. The composer handled the keyboard—handled is the precise word—and the duel that ensued between his ten flail-like fingers was to the death; the death of euphony. The first descending figure, it is hardly a theme—is persistently affirmed in various nontonalities by the orchestra till the slow mood, the piano all the while shrieking, groaning, howling, fighting back, and in several instances it seemed to rear and bite the hand that chastised it. The overtones roosted on the roof—yet Prokofieff, though he never coaxes a luscious tone, does not smash the unisons; besides, he had an able adversary to conquer, an instrument like an orchestra of bell tones. His piano figuration chiefly consists of brilliant hammerlike octaves and double notes taken at a dizzy tempo, and as fast as other pianists play single-finger passages. Diabolic glissandi, which skip from bass to treble, trill with interlocked octaves, a plentiful lack of conventional melody—you threw up your hands and despairingly ask:

If this be the music of the future, then the music of the past has been mere aural titillation. But all tremendously exciting because of the verve of the pianist, and his extraordinary gift in rhythms. There were moments when the piano and orchestra made sounds that evoked not only the downfall of empires, but also of fine crockery, the fragments flying in all directions. He may be the Cossack Chopin for the next generation—this tall, calm young man. The diabolic smiles press upon you as his huge hands, the hands of a musical primate, tear up trees and plow the soil. That fetching, old expression: "Hell to pay and no pitch hot" applies to Prokofieff; only he owns his hades and has the necessary pitch in abundance.

However, there is method in all these seething dissonances. Modulation is discarded; that is, normal key relationships. There is a very definite pattern in the concerto, which will never be played by any one on earth except Leo Ornstein, who is getting married this week. The human ear soon accommodates to such monstrous aberrations. We followed through the heat and fray of the battle a very logical scheme of development. Prokofieff is nothing if not cerebral. The etude-like opening astonishes, but the ideas are not striking. The surcease in the shape of a poetic mood was welcome. So he can be normal when he wishes, this prodigious Russian! The audience, a large and distinguished one, was too stunned to analyze its feelings. It was completely overcome, and when the rebound ensued Prokofieff had scored another success. But he wouldn't grant an encore. The Russian heart may be a dark place, but its capacity for mercy is infinite.

The orchestra is largely new. It plays better than it did, though not yet wooingly. Its prime characteristic is impetuous brilliancy. Young blood will have its fling, so much so that the first allegro of the Rachmaninoff work was not only rugged, but ragged. The succeeding movements were more smoothly delivered. A delightful novelty was the "Buba-Taga" of Liadoff, which sounds like something sweet to eat, but proved a mock-sinister sketch of the Russian witch whose name is invoked to frighten naughty children. It is an ingenious conceit, with the Valkyries just around the corner. And it was well played. Conductor Modeste Altschuler also figured in the program as an adapter for strings of Scriabine's charming "Nuances." But the hero of the evening was the lord of the new dynamics, Serge Prokofieff.

WOULD DROP 'TIGER, TIGER.'

Magistrate McAdoo Suggests Renaming Play 'Dyspepsia' or 'Sally.'

Chief Magistrate McAdoo refused yesterday to entertain a police complaint that the play "Tiger! Tiger!" in which Frances Starr is appearing at the Belasco Theatre, is immoral within the meaning of the law. He did, however, suggest certain changes in the play and these, he said, Mr. Belasco has agreed to make. Magistrate McAdoo handed down his decision after attending a performance of the play on Monday night. He holds that the title is misleading and suggests that instead of "Tiger! Tiger!" the play should be called "Dyspepsia," or possibly "Sally."

The most conspicuously objectionable points in the play, the Magistrate held, were a scene in the first act and part of a colloquy between two male characters. "The play," he said, "purports as a motive the solution of certain sexual and social questions. The obtrusion of the offensively suggestive details in the second scene of the first act is unnecessary, and in any event aggressively indecent within the meaning of the statute."

All this, Magistrate McAdoo pointed out, was a slander upon the tiger, who is monogamous and fond of domestic life. The play gets its name, he said, because one of the characters said he was suffering from the tiger in his bosom. It is because of this affliction that he suggested "Dyspepsia" as a fitting title.

Training for Foreign Trade

More than three hundred representative executives, department heads and younger men and women are enrolled in the class in Foreign Trade at the West Side Y. M. C. A., conducted by Dr. Edward Ewing Pratt, former chief of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

It is perhaps the most complete and thorough training in export and import trade ever organized in this country.

IF YOU HAVE ONE OR TWO MEN WHOSE GRASP OF FOREIGN TRADE IS WORTH DEVELOPING IT IS NOT TOO LATE TO PLACE THEM IN THIS CLASS.

Write or call the West Side Y. M. C. A., Columbus 7920 for information that will enable you to procure a few tickets to the lecture on

South American Trade Opportunities

Learn SPANISH On Your Own Victrola

With the war over business firms by hundreds are searching for men and women with a working knowledge of Spanish to help handle South American trade. They offer splendid salaries with opportunities for travel and rapid advancement.

In order to quickly train people to meet this need, the International Correspondence Schools have prepared a special course by which you can easily acquire a working knowledge of Spanish for commercial use right at home in spare time.

The entire course consists of fifty lessons on thirteen double disc records together with simple, explanatory texts. The discs can be used on any machine that will play Victor or Columbia records.

No classes to bother with, no going and coming to take up your time. You learn in the comfort and quiet of your own home with no one around to embarrass you. You get the absolutely correct pronunciation of native teachers. Study when you find it convenient for as long or short a time as you wish. No tiresome questions to answer or examinations to take. Your Victrola is your teacher.

The I. C. S. Language Method is based on 27 years' experience in teaching men and women in their own homes. It is endorsed by leading educators and over 40,000 delighted students.

It will cost you nothing to find out all about this simple, easy plan. Just write a letter or postcard and say: "Send me full details about the new course in Spanish."

PEACE AND PUBLIC OPINION.

By way of clearing the ground it may be said now that the freedom of the seas doctrine will not, or need not, prevent the building up of Britain's navy, or of ours; conversely, strengthening the sea power of the two English-speaking nations will not destroy the freedom of the seas. Further, the Monroe Doctrine will not, or need not, stand in the way of establishing a League of Nations, and the League of Nations will not supersede the Monroe Doctrine. Keeping these things in mind, we can readily see that there is no inconsistency in the utterances of LLOYD GEORGE and Mr. WINSTON CHURCHILL, who, while committing the British Government to the support of the League of Nations principle and practice, at the same time declare "that the League of Nations cannot "be for us a substitute for the British "Navy in any period that we can "foresee."

Great Britain is strengthening her navy, concurrently we are strengthening ours. The President and the Secretary of the Navy announce and approve a three-years' program of construction, which includes powerful battleships and many smaller units. Nobody believes or will have the hardihood to assert that Britain's navy or ours, joined or separately, will ever be used for wrong or oppression. They will not be used to deny to any law-abiding nation the rightful enjoyment of the freedom of the seas. That was a timely observation of Mr. GARVIN'S the other day when, in commenting upon Mr. WILSON'S second article, he said that in contending for free goods we might sacrifice free nations. The remark is timely, because it will help to remove misunderstanding. The British Navy was about the most powerful and effective instrument employed against Germany. It did abridge the freedom of the seas, but by helping to reduce Germany to impotence it insured the freedom of certain nations, large and small, which otherwise would have been by no means assured of their liberties. Against such an exercise of sea power, against its use in the cause of freedom and deliverance, Mr. WILSON'S doctrine of freedom of the seas cannot be directed. It cannot be so intended, for the public opinion of the civilized world would sanction no application of the doctrine which would hold the seas open for unrestricted neutral trade with a great nation like Germany arrayed in arms for wicked purposes, and employing all methods of warfare within its reach, lawful and unlawful alike, to gain its ends. Had Great Britain been forbidden to establish and maintain a commercial blockade preventing Germany from obtaining by sea foodstuffs and supplies of all kinds, the war would have had indefinite prolongation and an uncertain end.

The second of Mr. WILSON'S fourteen points, considered quite by itself, would put an end to naval warfare, would deprive a belligerent of the right to prevent trade with its enemy. Such a doctrine, we have said, would not have the assent of any nation from which the memory of the war just ended had not already faded. But the very language used by Mr. WILSON precludes consideration of his doctrine of the freedom of the seas as a thing by itself. Absolute freedom of navigation is to be enjoyed alike in peace and war, "except as the seas "may be closed in whole or in part "by international action for the en-"forcement of international cove-"nants." These words necessarily imply a pre-existing League of Nations, an international covenant internationally enforced. For the enforcement of any covenants entered into, the navies of Great Britain and of the United States would be needed, they would be employed for ends sanctioned by international agreement, a condition which excludes any conjecture that they might be employed in an unrighteous cause. The two navies and the League of Nations are not to be considered as substitutes, one for the other, but as parts of an international whole.

In a like manner, the apparent conflict of the League of Nations idea and the Monroe Doctrine will be reconciled because it must be reconciled. It is our traditional policy to abstain from meddling in European affairs, and we have won respect, if not full recognition, for our correlative policy of preventing European interference with the affairs of the New World in any manner threatening our security or that of our sister republics. The most natural and obvious way of reconciling the two principles of international action for the preservation of peace and the separateness of American interests would be a division of police jurisdiction, the United States as the greatest New World Power being charged exclusively with the duty of enforcing international agreements on this side of the ocean. That there must be such a conciliation of apparently opposing ideas is plain, for public opinion in this country is no more prepared for the abandonment of the Monroe Doctrine than British public opinion is prepared for the abandonment of the British Navy.

It is only by the force of public opinion that the League of Nations project can be carried to international enactment, and that in response to that force it will be enacted is more than an inference, it is a practical certainty, because of the horror of war engendered by the bloody strife ended by the armistice signed a month ago today. A significant testimony to the rise and sweep of the public demand for an effective safeguard against quarreling between nations is to be found in the letter from THEODORE ROOSEVELT, which we print today, in which he makes this declaration:

> I am now prepared to say what five years ago I would not have said. I think the time has come when we should say that under no circumstances shall there ever be a resort to war between the United States and the British Empire, and that no question can ever arise between them that cannot be settled in judicial fashion, in some such manner as questions between States of our own Union would be settled.

Four years ago, on Sept. 15, 1914, Mr. BRYAN, then Secretary of State, signed four treaties of arbitration, which were signed at the same time by the diplomatic representatives of Great Britain, France, Spain, and China. Treaties of like tenor had previously been signed with twenty-two other nations, including nearly all of the Central and South American republics, as well as Italy, Norway, Denmark, Switzerland, and Portugal. In those treaties, still in force, the high contracting parties "agreed that "all disputes between them, of every "nature whatsoever, to the settle-"ment of which previous arbitration "treaties or agreements do not apply "in their terms, or are not applied in "fact, shall, when diplomatic meth-"ods of adjustment have failed, be "referred for investigation and report "to a permanent International Com-"mission." It is the intent of these treaties that international differences shall be amicably adjusted through judicial inquiry and lapse of time. When these treaties were signed, Mr. ROOSEVELT was skeptical of their wisdom and effect. His doubts have been removed, he would now go much beyond the provisions of the Bryan treaties by a self-denying ordinance "that under no circumstances shall "there ever be a resort to war be-"tween the United States and the "British Empire."

Coming from ex-President ROOSEVELT this affirmation will be heartily welcomed, for it responds to a public opinion that is rapidly becoming universal. It will help to shape that opinion, to confirm it, to give it force and authority. It comes at a fortunate moment, when our recent observance of Britain's Day has revealed the depth and strength of the sentiment that makes us one in heart and purpose and ideals with the English people. The influence of the delegates of the two nations at the Paris Conference, if they faithfully represent the sentiment of those whose credentials they bear, will be exercised for a union and agreement of all eligible nations to establish and enforce those principles of justice and righteousness and peace which have so long been of common acceptance in this country and in Great Britain. In that union of effort we find the best ground for the hope that a League of Nations may be created.

FEDERAL TAX REVISION.

The contention over the War Tax bill applies mostly to the rates of the taxes, and the years to which the rates should apply. The greater the chance that those contentions will end in a deadlock, the greater the reason for the enactment of important noncontentious amendments of the present law. It is an open secret that this law, the one under which it is likely that the Federal taxes will be collected for this year as well as for last, could not be administered without explaining it in many features and softening it in others. There should be no difficulty about enacting the practice under the bill, according to the recommendations of the Internal Revenue Commissioner. They have been made part of the pending bill, but ought not to fail with it.

There are amendments to the bill itself about which there is such scant room for disagreement that they might be passed by common consent. One or two examples will suffice. The payment of interest on borrowed capital as an allowable deduction before the calculation of the tax, the assimilation of the tax status of partnerships and corporations, the allowance of deduction of losses from income, the enlargement of the depreciation allowance in view of entrance upon a period of declining inventories, the correction of the discrimination against small corporations, the correction of the definition of invested capital, are samples of alleviations which might be agreed upon. If any of them are found in the contentious class they might be dropped without causing the failure of others. In other words, this sort of amendment of the bill has nothing to do with its framework. That is too essentially objectionable to be condoned or amended. Those using taxation as a means of social reform and redressing inequalities of fortune cannot be expected to surrender until they are beaten. That is why the bill does not deserve to pass as a whole, and is not likely to. But that reason is not applicable to amendments which have nothing to do with sectional taxation, or penalizing those who favored the war.

Certainly those who consider that the bill's merits lie in those sections can have no objection to amendments which lessen their obnoxious quality with persons who think that taxes should be laid for revenue rather than for reforms, however admirable, or for punishment of wealth or capital, however deserved. There is no doubt about the disagreements respecting the bill. If there could be also agreement about the amendments they could be enacted separately, even though the bill itself should fail.

RECALLING 1884,

One does not have to be very old to remember when CARL MILLOCKER'S opera, "The Black Hussar," was the talk of this town. The evergreen COTTRELLY endeared it to us all, but the rest have faded from memory except DE WOLF HOPPER in the part of an anxious innkeeper in the Rhineland. He had had a sign painted, on one side of which gloomed the features of NAPOLEON, while the other emblazoned the wooden implacability of FREDERICK WILLIAM. Whenever the Prussian troops marched through the town the innkeeper, who was also Mayor or Postmaster, we forget which, turned FREDERICK WILLIAM to their gaze, and spoke eloquently of Prussian liberation; when the French marched in, he turned the sign around, showed NAPOLEON to the newcomers, and thrilled them with arias about the Empire and the Confederation of the Rhine. At last the French and Prussians began chasing each other through the town, and Mr. HOPPER grew so busy batting the sign around that he contracted nervous prostration.

This never-to-be-forgotten offering of the dead and gone McCaull Opera Company rises immediately before us when we read such headlines as "Rhine Populations Welcome Allies." Is the old Mayor of "The Black Hussar" still on the job? The sign seems to be swinging with a celerity that dumfounds the British as they move past the inn door:

> As we approach the Rhine our reception becomes more surprising. The authorities in such places as Düren say undisguisedly that they rejoice at our arrival.

The authorities are slow at swinging the sign. The people grow impatient, and hang around it themselves so as to show King GEORGE'S face unmistakably where Kaiser WILHELM'S shone forth of yore:

> The Mayors and their staffs act with admirable dignity, but much of the population is almost obsequious and servile to our men.

The Rhine, the Rhine, the German Rhine, the same yesterday, today, and forever! For MILLOCKER'S opera was no mere dream; it was based on Rhineland facts of 1813.

LOANS TO FOREIGN BUYERS.

Everybody knows that the billions we have loaned to our allies have yielded good profits to our trade. That will be equally true of our future advances to them, if they are not made impossible by the running out of the law which authorizes them. It is anomalous that our Treasury should make advances which result in private profit, although not made primarily for that purpose. Of course, the money lent abroad is raised by loans floated here, and the interest on such Liberty Loans must be raised by taxation, even though the Treasury collects interest on the foreign loans. To some that looks like taxation for investment, and they object to it. They are likely to object to it more after the end of the war than during the war. But the ending of hostilities does not end the reasons which justified the loans in the first place, and which will continue during the early months of peace.

The chief of those reasons is the difficulty in floating foreign loans among investors not familiar even with domestic Government loans. If our investors would take foreign loans more freely it would be better, and we should not see the joint and several loans of the foremost national borrowers selling at 7 per cent. yield, in competition with Liberty bonds selling to yield 4¼ per cent. or thereabout. When our Liberty bonds sell on a lower yield than our city bonds it is idle to speak about floating foreign Government bonds in any considerable quantities. Advances to our allies are not more for their benefit than for ours. When they were buying munitions and demoralizing our wage and cost systems the benefit was doubtful, although the profits were large. On advances to them in the near future the trade profits will be on a declining scale as conditions approach normal, but the foreign buying with the proceeds of the loans will check too rapid a readjustment of our prices to lower and steadier bases. The loans are justified on a business basis, but that is not the only reason for authorizing them in the event that they are asked for.

We are not going to force our accommodations upon our friends. It would be agreeable to find them financing themselves, even though that meant that they were supplying their needs at home instead of buying here. We would have more of our products left for our own consumption, and probably lower interest as well as lower prices. But it would not be consistent with our duty to our allies that, if they should ask for further loans, we should reply that we regretted that there was no law to justify our Treasury in continuing the support to which they had accustomed themselves. The authority for the loans should be given.

A TRIBUTE TO PERSHING.

"That very splendid achievement" is Colonel REPINGTON'S description of General PERSHING'S Meuse-Argonne offensive. The distinction of the American success shines with greater lustre the more it is examined and understood. Like Marshal FOCH, General PERSHING was not ready for the armistice, because it arrested the development of his plans. Both, however, wanted no more blood shed in the ranks of the Allies if the armistice could be effected on decisive terms. Marshal FOCH had not fought his battle, according to those in his confidence, when the enemy asked for a cessation of hostilities. The destruction or capture of the German Army was the object of FOCH'S strategy, and the enemy was being manoeuvred and driven into a hopeless position. Ten or twenty days more and the end would have come.

"My plans for the further use of the American forces," says General PERSHING in his report, "contem-"plated an advance between the "Meuse and the Moselle in the direc-"tion of Longwy by the First Army, "while at the same time the Second "Army should assume the offensive "toward the rich coal fields of Briey. "These operations were to be fol-"lowed by an offensive toward Châ-"teau-Salins, east of the Moselle, "thus isolating Metz." The orders had been given and the American troops were actually assaulting, playing the game to the last, when the hour struck on Nov. 11 for the last shot of the campaign.

The British military critic testifies that the work given General PERSHING was of supreme importance. "An advance down the Meuse," says Colonel REPINGTON, "would be the right and "decisive strategy whenever our "forces might be strong enough to "strike, and at the same time guard "themselves from the Metz side. It "was to be the matador thrust in the "bullfight." The Argonne Forest tested the mettle of the Americans, not all of whom had received their baptism of fire. "They fought," says their British admirer, "silently but grimly, doggedly, and fiercely," and they must have lost in one month, he estimates, 160,000 men in killed, wounded, and missing. And what a triumph of soldierly manhood it was, "under the most adverse conditions of "ground and season and of incom-"plete service"! And then we have from Colonel REPINGTON this ringing tribute in his dispatch to The World:

> To my mind there was nothing finer in the war than the splendid good comradeship displayed throughout by General PERSHING, and there was nothing more striking than the determined way in which he pursued his original plan of making the American Army feared and respected.

The credit of the great American achievement in France belongs to all arms; but, although General PERSHING is silent about his personal contribution, others will speak for him; and none with more authority and appreciation than our allies in France, who after four years of fighting understand how to appraise merit and know a great soldier when they have seen him in action. They never fail to pay their tribute to his swift and generous co-operation, his helpfulness, his unselfish activity in every emergency. West Point, its ideals and training, were never more handsomely vindicated in the performance and merits of one of its sons.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

They Pose as Victims of Misfortune.

Working in favor of Germany—and therefore against a just peace—is the fact that there is growing up in many, and far too many, minds a picture of her, correct enough to be accepted by well-intentioned sentimentalists and yet so far from the whole truth as to be utterly and abominably false.

The picture is that of a once great and proud people, with numerous and real claims to respect and even of admiration, which has been reduced by the fortunes of war to complete helplessness in the hands of stern enemies. For it happens that the Germans are in much the same condition as they would be if the victims of undeserved misfortune and about to suffer the most ruthless of exploitation. The consequence of this is that a sort of sympathy for them is growing up in groups small but highly articulate, and the members of these groups are gaining a cheap sense of kindliness and generosity by talk about "the under dog" and "kicking a man when he is down," ending up, usually, with a magnanimous exhortation—"Oh, now that we have won, let's forgive and forget."

Nothing, of course, pleases the Germans themselves better than silly and sickly chatter like this, and their propagandists at home and abroad are doing their very best to emphasize their own readiness to banish all animosities and make a fresh start—if only they be allowed to make it with their crimes forgiven and forgotten. No inclination to permit them to do so exists among the nations that suffered in full through four long years the consequences of Germany's brigand ambition; but over here, where realization of what war with Germany was had only begun when the war ended, the impulse to "let bygones be bygones" does exist in some quarters.

A Contrast with a Lesson.

Whoever is in danger of having his—or her—sympathies entrapped by contemplation of Germany's hard fate can regain sanity by reading the admirable, and more than admirable, dispatch in which Mr. JAMES contrasted yesterday conditions as he found them in Treves and as he left them in Soissons only a few days ago. The one city has not been touched by the hand of war, the other is little more than scattered piles of stone and brick. Treves is populous, and, for all that anybody in it can see, its inhabitants are prosperous; Soissons is silent and empty, wrecked probably beyond repair.

As Mr. JAMES wrote, the German soldier returns to a home—a house with a roof—and in it are his wife and children; the French or Belgian soldier in innumerable instances cannot find even where his house stood, his family is scattered or dead, and not infrequently the members of it who are dead are more fortunate than the others. It is no wonder that the Germans love the phrase, "forget and forgive." It is no wonder, either, that their foreign agents and auxiliaries are repeating it with unction and doing their best to confuse justice with revenge.

The more of such confusion that can be created, the less of responsibility for their murders and their thefts will the Germans have to bear, and also the less of obligation will there be to do what the pacifistically inclined hate most, and that is to do anything about anything when the doing is troublesome, expensive, or dangerous.

Interpreting Military Movements.

A returning member of the 149th Artillery was quoted yesterday as praising highly the courage and efficiency of the 165th Infantry in the battle of Champagne. That the Illinois private did that was fine; what is not so fine, or fine at all, is that he went on to make an invidious comparison—to say that when the Alpine Chasseurs, the flower of the French Army, were falling back, and French officers were advising a general retreat before the enemy's superior numbers, the officers of the 165th "scouted the idea" and went forward.

That, it can be stated with confidence, was not the fact in that particular case, but the interpretation put by a private soldier on military movements seen by him. In more than probability—in practical certainty—the interpretation was quite wrong.

If the Chasseurs went back, as presumably they did, it was in obedience to orders because they had been fighting long and hard and had earned a rest. And if the Americans at the same time went forward, as of course they did, since the man who saw them said so, it was in obedience to orders from the same commander whom the Frenchmen obeyed, and it was done, not after "scouting" anybody's advice, but in the regular sequence of relief that takes place in all prolonged battles.

Private soldiers are excellent sources of information when they tell what they have seen, but as to the meaning of what they saw, and especially as to its relation to the battle as a whole, they are lamentably apt to go astray. Sometimes the straying is merely amusing, but sometimes, as in this instance, its consequences, so far as it has any, are deeply regrettable.

A Generous Patron of Medicine.

Another great fortune, gathered through many years of effort, has been scattered by the will of its late possessor in the way that has become almost habitual with American millionaires. Much the larger part of it, that is, has been divided among institutions educational, charitable, and of scientific research, and from the bequests thus made the public, other than personal heirs, is to profit permanently.

Captain DE LAMAR'S especial interest, judging from his legacies to medical schools, seems to have centred chiefly in alleviating the kind of human suffering and loss that is caused by disease, and it was characteristic as much of the time as of the man that he wanted his money used rather for the prevention than the cure of the maladies of his fellow-men.

What special reason Captain DE LAMAR had for making this particular disposition of his wealth is not stated, but it is one of the half dozen best that he could have chosen. His beneficence would have been known to more people had he caused the erection of great buildings on which his name could have been inscribed, but by endowing research he assured the efficiency of his gold in far higher degree.

Health and Education for Peace.

It is noted that there have not been adopted any set rules to be followed by the nations that are to incorporate and join the proposed League of Nations. All sorts of suggestions have been proposed by many different kinds and classes of people. I would like to see as a requirement essential to membership in the League of Nations two rules which, if adopted and carefully adhered to, would, to my mind, do more good for the world as a whole, both directly and indirectly, than any other two that I can think of. These are: (1) That each nation, before being allowed membership in the League of Nations, be required to agree to compulsory child education. At least, a minimum standard should be required, as, for instance, schooling of all children between the ages of 8 and 14 years for five days a week, at least three hours per day, over a period of six months per year. (2) Agree to the adoption and practical application of what may be termed an international hygiene and sanitary service along lines similar to our present Public Health and Marine Hospital Service and modern municipal Boards of Health.

While it is realized that more requirements could be stipulated, at the same time it is thought that, if these two are adopted, the civilization of the world as a whole would be greatly improved in the shortest possible time. This would accrue to the good of all and to the disadvantage of no one.

ROOSEVELT ON ANGLO-AMERICAN PEACE.

Believes the Time Has Come When the United States and the British Empire Can Agree to a Universal Arbitration Treaty—Never a Resort to War Between Them.

Dear Colonel Roosevelt:

During my recent sojourn in England I accepted an appointment on the organizing committee of the English-Speaking Union, the President of which is the Right Hon. Arthur J. Balfour, and I undertook to do what might prove possible to secure for the organization membership and active co-operation on this side of the Atlantic.

The purpose of the Union is to draw together in a bond of comradeship the English-speaking peoples of the world. This purpose is, as you know, in line with what I have myself had at heart during all the active years of my life, and it was an ideal in which my father before me was keenly interested.

During the years of the war I have taken the ground that the war should be followed, with the least possible delay, by an association of the English-speaking peoples of the world. Since America came into the war I have emphasized with many audiences the importance of following up our association with England for the active work of the fighting with a union that should enable America and England to tackle together the problems of the settlement after the war and the continuing problems of the maintenance of representative democratic government throughout the world. One of the services resulting from this world's war (a war that will go down into history as the war of German aggression) has been to bring to English-speaking peoples on both sides of the Atlantic a realization of the fact that they had ideals in common, that their interests were very close together, and that they had a similar duty as members of the Family of Nations to do together what was in their power to maintain peace and justice throughout the world.

I hold that there is no reason why there should not be on the two sides of the Atlantic the same relation for peace that has for a century obtained on the two sides of the great lakes. It has been the fortune of America to serve as the deciding factor in this war, but it seems to me essential for Americans to remember that, while their own boys in khaki have rendered magnificent service, our allies, England, France, Italy, and Belgium, have been carrying the burdens of the war for four years while our share has been restricted to a little more than twelve months. Americans ought now to make expression to England of their obligation for the service rendered by England and England's allies in maintaining the struggle until America was ready to come in. We should make clear our understanding that these allies were fighting not only for their own existence and for the maintenance of civilization, but for the policies and the liberties of the United States. Such a service can be rendered by bringing to the work of the English-Speaking Union hearty co-operation on the part of representative American citizens. I hope very much that you may be prepared to give to the Union the benefit of your all-valuable name and influence.

I am, as ever, with much respect and with cordial regards,

GEO. HAVEN PUTNAM,
Late Major 176th U. S. Vols.,
President American Rights League.
Colonel Theodore Roosevelt.

New York Offices, 347 Madison Av.
Dec. 5, 1918.

My Dear Major Putnam: I do not care to go on any board or into any organization of any kind at present, more especially as I am spending all my endeavors to secure in this country a spirit of undivided American nationalism, based on an Americanism which disregards all questions of national origin and which treats this as a new nation, different from all other nations, entitled to the single-hearted and undivided loyalty of every one of its citizens, and bound to develop in every way its own distinctive American ideals.

But with general purposes of your league, or union, I am in hearty accord. I agree absolutely with you that this war has brought home to the great majority of thinking men in this country the fact that we, the English-speaking peoples, of the United States and the British Empire, possess both ideals and interests in common. We can best do our duty, as members of the family of nations, to maintain peace and justice throughout the world by first rendering it impossible that the peace between ourselves can ever be broken. I agree entirely with what you say as to the immense service rendered to us by England, France, Italy, Belgium, and other allies, and as to our duty to give tangible expression to our sense of this obligation. Moreover, I agree that there is no reason why there should not be on the two sides of the Atlantic the same relation for peace that has for a century obtained on the two sides of the Great Lakes.

I regard the British Navy as probably the most potent instrumentality for peace in the world. I do not believe we should try to build a navy in rivalry to it, but I do believe we should have the second navy in the world. Moreover, I am now prepared to say what five years ago I would not have said. I think the time has come when the United States and the British Empire can agree to a universal arbitration treaty. In other words, I believe that the time has come when we should say that under no circumstances shall there ever be a resort to war between the United States and the British Empire, and that no question can ever arise between them that cannot be settled in judicial fashion, in some such manner as questions between States of our own Union would be settled.

It is wicked not to try to live up to high ideals and to better the condition of the world. It is folly, and maybe worse than folly, not to recognize the actual facts of existence while striving thus to realize our ideals. There are many countries not yet at a level of advancement which permits real reciprocity of relations with them, and many other countries so completely unlike our own that at present no such agreement would be possible with them. But the slow march forward of the generations has brought the English speaking peoples to a point where such an agreement is entirely feasible; and it is eminently desirable among ourselves.

Very truly yours,

For International Rules Against the Old German Restrictions.

[A letter published in The London Times.]

At the Peace Conference the nation will be wisely jealous of maintaining the sea power of our fighting ships in time of war; should we not be equally careful to safeguard the sea power of our trading ships in time of peace? In war naval power and the mercantile marine have proved mutually dependent; in peace the fabric of our industries and our commerce, indeed of our very existence as a nation, is built up on our trading ships.

The war has demonstrated once more that the belligerent who misuses his sea power inevitably raises up fresh enemies for himself, and the verdict of the many nations, neutral at the beginning of the war, which have thrown in their lot with us proves that in this respect we have been guiltless. It can hardly be questioned that our sea power has saved the civilization of the world. This fact must not be forgotten at the Peace Conference, and we must be very sure of the future before we can be parties to any agreement which restricts the use of sea power in war to international action for the enforcement of international covenants.

President Wilson's proposals deal with the freedom of the seas in peace as well as in war, and there can, I take it, be no question of our giving our fullest support to the principle in times of peace. Freedom of the seas in international trade, in the sense of equal treatment of all flags in all ports, should be a cardinal principle of the peace settlement. And freedom of the seas carries with it freedom of access to the seas. The voyage itself across the high seas is merely a link in international intercourse. The land communications with the ports, and the territorial waters through which the vessel must pass from one sea to another, must be open on equal terms to all passengers and to all cargoes carried in international trade under all flags.

Let every nation determine for itself the conditions under which its ports may be used, but let every nation in all international trades give equal opportunities to vessels under all flags, whether its own or the flags of the nations with which it is trading.

There is nothing new in the principle here advocated. In theory, at any rate, it has been accepted in the past by all maritime nations. Great Britain and the United States have given it specific recognition by guaranteeing the use of the Canals of Suez and Panama to the flags of all nations on terms of absolute equality. In practice, however, Germany denied the freedom of the seas to foreign flags. As the Departmental Committee of the Board of Trade on Shipping and Shipbuilding has shown, the prosperity of the German mercantile marine was in great measure founded on the abuse by the Central Empires of their favorable geographical position, which enabled them to impose, through the control stations, restrictions on the Eastern emigration traffic passing across their territories. In this way, and, to a lesser degree, by means of the differential rates charged on the German railways on cargoes to and from German ports, elaborate organizations were built up to secure traffic for vessels under the German flag, and the advantages thus obtained for German ships were used for political purposes and for the opening up of other international trades by systematic rate cutting.

The nations of the world must now make their choice between the German policy of discrimination and exclusion and the policy of freedom which has hitherto been followed by Great Britain and the United States. The decision is of vital importance, not only to the maritime nations, but also to those States whose access to the sea lies through foreign territory. There can be no doubt as to our choice if we are in earnest in seeking to eliminate causes of international friction which might lead to future wars. International commerce will be more than ever necessary after the destruction of war, and it would be deplorable to set out now on a course which would hamper the natural flow of trade and lead to endless quarrels among all the nations of the world. Unless the principle of freedom and equality is reaffirmed and faithfully observed, the maritime nations will be driven one after another into a policy of discrimination and exclusion which will sooner or later imperil the peace of the world. The question of when, and under what conditions, the ships of Germany and Austria should be given this freedom stands separate and apart. The other nations of the world must first establish the principle among themselves.

A letter from a friend of mine, who is a Major General in the British Army, came into my hands this morning, and he gives such flattering praise to the United States troops that I venture to give you this quotation from the letter:

"The United States troops have done magnificently. I have seen a great deal of them, one way and another—or did so during the early Summer—as it was part of my job to do what I could to help in the training of those who were in the British zone. A finer lot of men and a better lot of young officers I never saw, while the senior officers could not have been keener or pleasanter to deal with. Since then they have done some fine work with us and have had some chance—of which they have taken more than to the full—with the French."

ANY AMERICAN.

I have a hearth—the altar of my dreams;
I have a garden where it almost seems,
At night, I hear the flowers laugh and cry,
And Beauty's fairy footsteps stealing by.

I have a comrade who is ever near
To comfort or to laugh in hours of cheer;
She is my battle-partner, brave and true—
"Strong as the torrent, gentle as the dew."

These are the treasures which my fortune prove;
Yet comes the old refrain: "I could not love
Thee, dear, so much, loved I not Honor more,"
As Hark! a drum is beating tunes of war.

Asking the best! Of old our fathers fought
Thou must be won again—shall we have fears?

So for a little or a longer while
I leave my flowers, my hearth, my comrade's smile,
To fight so that the weary waiting world
May shout to see its last grim war-flag furled.

And if I come, and if I wait for thee
Somewhere beyond the last storm-driven sea,
Some day, dear treasures, I shall hold you all

Great Garden Meeting, After Hearing Cardinal O'Connell, Demands Self-Determination.

SENDS MESSAGE TO SENATE

Cheers at Mention of President's Name Compel Speaker to Suspend—"Star-Spangled Banner" Sung.

A great gathering of Irish men and women in Madison Square Garden last night sent a wireless message to President Wilson asking that he stand at the peace conference for self-determination for Ireland. Both inside the Garden and at the overflow meetings the audiences roared their cheers for Ireland and everything Irish. This is the message to President Wilson:

> To Woodrow Wilson,
> President of the United States,
> On board steamer George Washington:
> Twenty-five thousand American citizens assembled in and around Madison Square Garden, with Cardinal O'Connell of Boston and Governor Whitman of New York as principal speakers, wish you Godspeed and safe return and urge you to demand at the Peace Congress self-determination for the people of Ireland.
> JOHN W. GOFF, Chairman.
> ALFRED J. TALLEY, Secretary.

In resolutions adopted without opposition the same appeal was made not only to President Wilson, but to the Foreign Relations Committee of the United States Senate. The resolution closed with this paragraph:

> Therefore, we respectfully but earnestly urge that our President declare at the Peace Congress that the people of Ireland should, as a matter of right and justice, be governed only in accordance with their consent, and that the will of the majority, ascertained by a plebiscite of the adult population, be accepted as the sovereign will of the people, instead of the present foreign rule by force.

From the moment when all who could jam themselves inside rose at the entrance of some bagpipes playing "Ireland Forever" and stood long enough to cheer the procession to the platform, which included Governor Whitman, Cardinal O'Connell, Vicar General Mooney of the Archdiocese of New York, Supreme Court Justices Goff and Gavegan, and others, to that at which it cheered the last Irish song by John Finnegan, the meeting was harmonious, happy, and noisy. The mention by Mgr. Mooney of the name of Woodrow Wilson brought such cheering that the priest had to suspend for several minutes.

Cardinal O'Connell dwelt upon the contribution to the world, to America, and to New York City of Irish faith and its works, and went on:

"It is because the people of Ireland have solemnly kept their sacred word, given to their great apostle, to be faithful to Peter's successor as they would be faithful to Christ, that they have felt the heel of a foreign despot mercilessly grinding them down into the very dust of humiliation. Yes, let us say it frankly and openly, for it is the truth, it is the fidelity of Ireland to all she holds most sacred which has been the chief cause of her offending."

The Cardinal spoke of the shaking of the "kaleidoscope of the world" and of the falling away of old conditions, and declared that unless some power greater than the force of anarchy prevails all the world would be shaken to its foundations. The struggles of other small nations for freedom were referred to by the speaker, who asserted that Ireland "for full seven centuries dominated by a foreign rule acquired only by force and even today exercised by force" was as much as any entitled to call upon the world, and notably upon America, to "reinstate her in full possession of her complete liberty."

He likened Ireland's struggle for freedom to America's own, reviewed the history of the Irish striving through centuries, and demanded:

"Is it the Bolsheviki only who now are to be acknowledged as free? Is it because, being Catholic, the Irish people repudiate Bolshevism that they are now to be repudiated and their just claim forgotten and neglected?

"Let them beware in time who encourage by their actions and words today before the court of the world such dangerous conclusions as these.

"Was the great war a conflict for true freedom under right for all alike, or was it a grim hoax played upon the ingenuous by the shrewd manipulators of clever phrases?"

The purpose of the meeting, said Cardinal O'Connell, was that faith in Governments and rules and Congresses, in divine principles and human agencies, should survive. Next he discussed the motives of the war and America's purpose in entering the struggle, adding:

"Who was it who by the enunciation of these great principles united the peoples of the whole suffering earth? It was our own President—once Wilson of America, now Wilson of the world. Tomorrow he lands at Brest—Brest, the very port out from which Count Arthur Dillons ailed with his three thousand Irish troops to aid America to obtain from England the very principle of self-determination which today Ireland demands and which we of America, in accordance with the principles enunciated by our President, today also are determined by every legitimate and lawful and Christian means to aid Ireland to obtain. For Ireland equally with America fought in this conflict for right.

"May God grant that the voice of Ireland be heard," he pleaded, and concluded:

"I firmly believe that the day that England honestly faces her full duty to Ireland and fulfills it faithfully, God will bless her as she has not known His blessing for many centuries. For as with the individual soul, so with the soul of a nation—a clear conscience is the only door to happiness."

The Garden was decorated liberally with American flags and less so with the colors of the Irish Republic, green, white, and orange. Justice Goff, who presided, introduced Governor Whitman after the audience, with John Finnegan, had sung "The Star-Spangled Banner" and Mgr. Mooney had invokes the blessing. The Governor devoted himself largely to welcoming Cardinal O'Connell to New York State and to praising the part played by the Irish of America, and particularly of New York, in winning the war. Other speakers were Supreme Court Justice Daniel F. Cohalan and John Devoy. Assistant District Attorney Alfred J. Talley and James P. Hastings were Secretaries of the meeting and Richard F. Dalton was its temporary Chairman.

FIGHTS CHANGE OF VENUE.

Dr. Rumely Objects to Going to Washington to Plead.

Dr. Edward A. Rumely, formerly publisher of The Evening Mail and under indictment and something like $30,000 bail on the charge of perjury in connection with his statement to the Government concerning the former ownership of The Evening Mail, was brought before United States Commissioner Hitchcock yesterday afternoon on the application of the Department of Justice to transfer him to the jurisdiction of the District of Columbia. He is wanted there to plead to two new indictments recently found against him in the United States Courts of the District. Dr. Rumely, through his attorney, Frederick J. Powell, vigorously protested against being removed from the jurisdiction of the United States Court for the Southern District of New York.

Commissioner Hitchcock finally adjourned the case for further hearing on Dec. 17. When yesterday's hearing was over, Dr. Rumely issued a long typewritten statement, alleging Government "persecution," a part of which follows:

> My bank and other records are here. This is my home. Here is where my activities complained of occurred. Most of the witnesses are here. The Mail was published here. This is where the publicity campaign for my destruction was launched. This is where I should have the opportunity to clear myself. But, suddenly, the Government tries to move me into strange surroundings, to a court with different rules of procedure, hundreds of miles away from witnesses and evidence. To needlessly increase and duplicate the cost of my defense is an unfair burden. To handicap me in bringing out the facts is a wrong.

GIVES REAL TEXT AS PROOF

Insinuation That He Opposes President's International Policies, the Doctor Says, Is a Falsehood.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University, who was represented in a Paris dispatch to The New York American yesterday as making an attack on President Wilson in an interview cabled to Paris, made public yesterday a copy of the interview. The Paris dispatch to The American said:

"I do not, of course, see The New York American, and have therefore no personal knowledge of what it prints. If it insinuates that I have authorized an interview or statement for publication abroad criticising the President's going to the Peace Conference, or opposing his international policies, it utters a falsehood. I could only interpret such a statement as part of the systematic pro-German and anti-national propaganda with which this paper has so long been associated in the public mind, the object in this particular case being to make the American people appear to be divided in counsel at a critical moment.

"The interview referred to was written by Edward Marshall, a well known and thoroughly responsible newspaper man, and contained no criticism whatever of the President, or, indeed, any mention of his name, save as having heretofore used general terms only in speaking of the league of nations and freedom of the seas."

Dr. Butler's Interview.

The interview which was cabled to Paris was as follows:

"The American people approach the Peace Conference in a very fine and broad minded spirit, but without understanding the specific policies which they should consider and support and without any commitments to such policies. The public statements of the President have been almost universally and perhaps purposely couched in vague and general terms and the more specific policies outlined by Senator Lodge were of course not advanced on behalf of the Administration.

"There are three general phrases that the American people have been hearing constantly. They are 'self-determination,' a 'league of nations,' and 'the freedom of the seas.' The first relates to the thousand-year-old problem of nationality; the second to the two-thousand-year-old problem of a better world-order; and the third to a specific and highly important item in that world-order.

"The American people believe in the self-determination of peoples and in the principle of nationality involving national consciousness and organization, national tradition, and national economic life. For this reason they are ready to support with complete unanimity policies permitting the Czechoslovaks, the Jugoslavs, and the Poles to organize their own independent governments and to take their places in the family of nations. For this reason they have applauded the return of Alsace-Lorraine to France, they will support the return of Northern Sleswig to Denmark, the return of the Trentino to Italy, and of sectors of Macedonia, Thrace, and Asia Minor, which have largely dominating Greek populations, to either the sovereignty or the jurisdiction of Greece.

"American opinion overwhelmingly favors home rule for Ireland, but the sober judicious majority would regard with dismay any attempted application to this problem of the principle of self-determination which would disrupt or even weaken the British Empire, since in every case, except as to the still unsolved problem of Ireland, the British imperial system has been a veritable nest for the hatching out of new, free, and self-governing peoples. So far as the principle of self-determination is concerned, therefore, American public opinion will be neither timid on the one hand nor Chauvinistic on the other.

"The possibility of a League of Nations has been discussed for centuries, and probably Metternich and Talleyrand thought that just such a league was being organized at the Congress of Vienna 104 years ago. The foundations of that structure were insecure, however, for it was built on the shifting sands of reaction, of imperialism, of international rivalry, and of military power.

The Notion of Socialists.

"Thus far two general and very different notions as to the League of Nations have found currency: The one is that supported by orthodox socialists and has in mind the destruction of all the essential elements and characteristics of nationality in order to bring about what I have sometimes called a colloidal or jelly-like internationalism without real nations. This is the notion of the Lenines and Trotskys, of the Liebknechts and the I. W. W. sympathizers. The achievement of this ideal would bring civilization to an end, make order impossible, destroy liberty, and put mankind back at the foot of the ladder from which it began to mount when the Roman Empire fell to pieces.

"The other notion of the League of Nations involves what I have called crystalline or true internationalism. In this each nation remains self-conscious, self-determined, and ambitious in its own right, and takes its place in a new international structure as an independent element—like a single crystal in an ordered group of crystals. In this case the group or league becomes stronger or more powerful according as the nations that compose it become stronger and more powerful. True internationalism must be built on the union of strong and self-respecting nations. False internationalism would weaken or destroy together those nations which accept it.

"The American people will have nothing to do with the false internationalism of Lenine and Trotzky, Liebknecht and the I. W. W. They know perfectly well that these men are enemies of a democratic republic, whether in Russia, Germany, or the United States. On the other hand, the American people will support, not with unanimity, by any means, but by a substantial majority, a well-considered and thoroughly practical project for a League of Nations which shall be based upon the principles of true internationalism.

"There are those who urge that the example of the Constitution of the United States should be followed in organizing this league, that precise and definitive articles of government should be adopted, that an international legislature, executive, and judiciary should be erected, and that the part of the nations in the new organization should be similar to that of the States in the United States. There are two difficulties in the way of so ambitious a program. The first is that the public opinion of the world is not ready to support it, and the second is that some of the necessary conditions of success which were present in the case of the United States would be lacking in the case of such a League of Nations. The United States met with a century of difficulties in spite of unity of language, unity of tradition, and unity of legal system. These three vitally important unities would be lacking in a League of Nations which should take the United States as its model.

"The true analogy between the United States and a League of Nations lies not on the surface, but deeper. It is found in the principle of federation with its accompanying characteristics of legal and economic co-operation. American opinion is ready for this if it be guided by a policy of lofty patriotism, broad international service, and sincere democratic feeling.

How Can It Be Formed?

"What the American people are asking today is this: Given conditions as they now exist in the world, how shall we proceed to form an effective League of Nations? This question the head of the American Government has not attempted to answer. The most practical procedure appears to be the following: The Allied Powers which have won the war have been for the purpose of the war, and at the present moment are, a League of Nations. They have unified their international policies. They have put their armies and their navies under single commands; they have pooled all their resources in shipping, food, munitions, and credit. Let these nations, assembled by their representatives at Versailles, declare themselves to be a League of Nations organized for the precise purpose for which the war was fought, and with which their several people are entirely familiar, namely, the definition and protection of standards of international right and justice, the sanctity of international obligation, and the right of the smaller and less numerous peoples to be free from attack or domination by their larger and more powerful neighbors.

"As a beginning nothing more is needed. There is no necessity for an international constitution, no necessity for an elaborate international Government machine, in order that the great enterprise may be launched. So far as these may be needed, they very well may come later.

"The second step should be to invite those nations that have been neutral in the war to join the league on condition that they formally give adhesion to the three ends or purposes for which the league is organized.

"The third step should be to invite the recently submerged and oppressed nationalities to present before the league their several cases for hearing and determination. When these have fully shown the basis of their geographical and political claims, and when the League of Nations has been satisfied as to the justice of these claims, then the petitioners should be invited to form their own Governments, and, when they have done so, they should be admitted to the League of Nations as independent units.

"While this process is going on and so long afterward as may be necessary Germany and Austria-Hungary should be kept outside the league. It is inconceivable that the Governments and peoples which almost disrupted and overthrew the civilized world should be invited to confer as to the method of the world's reconstruction, or as to their own punishment for their own sins, or as to the form of Government to be adopted by the peoples whom they have so long dominated or terrorized.

"When the League of Nations shall be wholly satisfied that Germany and Austria-Hungary and the Germans and Austro-Hungarians have washed from their hands the blood of Belgium and Serbia, have really repented for such crimes as the Lusitania and Sussex, and have exorcised the evil spirits that have possessed them, then and then only should Germany and Austria-Hungary be taken back into the family which they jointly attempted to murder.

American Public Mystified.

"I see no practical way other than this in which any headway can be made with regard to the project for a League of Nations. If there be an attmept to build it on the foundations of sentimentality or artificiality or neglect of the obvious facts, the project will fail and one of the greatest opportunities growing out of the world war will be lost. The resumption of the work of Hague conferences and the building of an international judicial and economic structure would follow the foundation of such a league as I suggest as a matter of course and in due time.

"The American public is wholly mystified as to what is meant by 'freedom of the seas.' That phrase had a pretty definite meaning as late as the time of the American civil war, but subsequent events have deprived that meaning of much significance. In time of peace the seas are and long have been entirely free. In time of war they have always been commanded by the possessor of the strongest navy. If that condition had not prevailed in 1914 Germany would have won the war just ended within twelve months from the time of its beginning. With Germany's Army in a position to do as it chose, and the naval hands of Great Britain and France tied behind their backs, the issue raised by Germany on Aug. 4, 1914, would not long have remained uncertain. The mastery of the seas by the British Navy has proved to be the most powerful single element in bringing about the downfall of militarism.

"The world realizes that fact, and will not support any proposal which would change this condition in essence, although it may do so in form. Unquestionably the Allies have good reason to approve those conditions on the sea which just now have prevailed. The cowardly and wicked use of the submarine by Germany was the greatest menace to the freedom of the sea that history records. The Barbary pirates and roving privateers were negligible when compared with the submarines. If the phrase 'freedom of the seas' has to do with access to navigable waters by landlocked people or with unprivileged use of international straits, waterways and canals, well and good. American opinion will support 'freedom of the seas' when used in such a sense.

"The American heart has been touched by this war as never before. The sufferings and sorrows, the patience and endurance, the heroism and sacrifice of the Allies, particularly of France and Great Britain, have stirred America to the depths. The American people realize that the difficulties of peace are to be quite comparable to the dangers and disasters of war, and that where the ruling principles are to have so many and so important concrete illustrations, there naturally will arise differences of opinion more or less sharp, and conflicts of temperament more or less open. The American people will remember the similar difficulties and conflict that arose between wholly patriotic and high-minded men in our own country at the close of our American Revolution and again at the close of our civil war. We of the United States shall be patient and endeavor to see beyond and behind these superficial conflicts, first, because now our people understand Europe as they never did before, and second, because we are bound to the victorious peoples of Europe by stronger and more affectionate ties than ever have existed in the past."

WRECK DECISION DUE TODAY

Hylan's Findings Expected at Noon, with Warrants for Officials.

Relatives and friends of victims of the Malbone Street Tunnel wreck on the Brighton Beach line of the B. R. T. system, are anxiously awaiting the decision of Mayor Hylan in the proceedings at which he sat as Committing Magistrate to fix the criminal responsibility for the accident. It is expected the decision will b ehanded down in the Court House, Brooklyn, at noon today.

It was confidently expected in Brooklyn last evening that the Mayor will issue warrants for th earrest of at least three officials, high in the Brooklyn Rapid Transit system, as well as for some of the minor employes, directly responsible for the catastrophe.

District Attorney Lewis said last night that if warrants for the B. R. T. officials are issued he will appear personally before the Magistrate in whose court the prisoners will be arraigned and ask that heavy bail be imposed.

The Kings County Grand Jury continued its wreck inquiry yesterday. Chairman Hubbell of the Public Service Commission and Commissioner Hervey told of the agreement entered into by the B. R. T. and the reuresentatives of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers early in the morning following the accident. More than 150 witnesses have been examined by the Grand Jury.

If indictments are found against certain B. R. T. officials they will be followed by bench warrants from the County Court. If by chance indictments are found against persons for whose arrest the Mayor may issue warrants, the bench warrants would take precedence and the persons arrested would be taken at once to the County Court to plead to the indictments.

PRINCESS HELENA FREED.

Norway Gets Serbian Widow of Grand Duke Ivan Out of Russia.

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 10.—Great Britain's last remaining representative in Russia, Vice Consul Parker, reached here on a steamer today from Petrograd. Another passenger on the steamer was Princess Helena, daughter of King Peter of Serbia and wife of Grand Duke Ivan Constantinovitch. Princess Helena for several months was a prisoner of the Bolsheviki. She was released through the influence of the Norwegian Legation.

Late last July a dispatch to the Cologne Volkszeitung from Moscow reported that Grand Duke Ivan Constantinovitch, together with three other Russian Grand Dukes, had been carried off by an unidentified band which had broken into their residences.

Carl W. Ackerman, in a recent dispatch to THE NEW YORK TIMES from Ekaterinburg, reported that the bodies of five Grand Dukes had been found near that place in a well into which the victims had been thrown alive by the Bolsheviki and then killed with hand grenades.

WEDS BERNARD K. MARCUS.

Miss Libby M. Phillips the Bride of Banker at Hotel Astor.

Miss Libby M. Phillips, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. L. Phillips of 590 West End Avenue, and Bernard K. Marcus were married last evening at the Hotel Astor, a reception and dinner dance following the ceremony.

The bride, in white satin and point lace, was attended by Miss Sylvia Phillips as maid of honor ,and the Misses Lillian Unterberg, Jeannette Lorber, Beatrice Lerner, and Beatrice Cowan, who were bridesmaids. Young Miss Blanche Phillips was the flower girl. Henry Baker acted as best man.

The bride has been active in Red Cross work. Mr. Marcus is the son of Joseph S. Marcus, and is Executive Vice President of the Bank of the United States. He directed the Liberty Loan campaigns on the east side, and is a graduate of Columbia.

Jewish Welfare Workers to Wed.

The engagement is announced of Miss Ruth Heller, a daughter of Rabbi Max Heller and Mrs. Heller of New Orleans, to George L. Cohen of New York. Miss Heller was graduated from Tulane University last Summer and since September has been doing work here for the Jewish Welfare Board. Mr. Cohen was graduated form the New York University and is practising law. He is active in the Henry Meinhard Memorial Settlement at 100 East 101st Street, this city, and he has also been associated with the Jewish Welfare Board.

R. S. Hudson Marries Miss Randolph

The marriage of Robert Spear Hudson, Third Secretary of the British Embassy in Washington, and Miss Hannah Randolph, a daughter of Philip S. P. Randolph of Philadelphia, took place in that city yesterday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Charles Penrose Keith. Miss Randolph, who is a sister of Mrs. Philip Stevenson of Westbury, L. I., had another sister, Mrs. John R. Fell, as her only attendant. Ronald Campbell of London was the best man, and the ushers were Emlen Randolph, Oliver Harriman, Nigal Law, and Crawford Stuart.

Society Women Act as Waitresses.

The Duchess de Chaulnes and Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt were among those who acted as waitresses yesterday at the Birdcage tearoom, run in connection with the Red Cross Shop at 587 Fifth Avenue. Mrs. Allen G. Wellman was captain of the waitresses. Major Eric Lancaster of the British Army spoke during the afternoon, being introduced by Clive Bayley, the British Consul General.

Others who served tea at the tables were Mrs. James B. Haggin, Mrs. Charles Greenough, Mrs. Norrie Sellar, Mrs. Craig Biddle, Mrs. Lounsbery Perry, Mrs. F. T. Frelinghuysen, Mrs. Angier B. Duke and Miss Geraldine M. Graham.

CLUBS IN FORMER SALOONS.

Unnamed Philanthropist Provides Recreation Rooms for Boys.

Under the asupices of the Lenox Hill Settlement, the United Community Club is now installed at 404 East Sixty-fourth Street in the premises lately occupied by the Suburban Café, which was one of the best-patronized saloons in the neighborhood. The movement of taking over abandoned saloons and turning them into clubs for men and boys has been started and financed by a gentleman who prefers to have his name not mentioned. The work is under the direction and control of Miss Rosalie Manning, head worker of the settlement.

This club is the third of the kind to be started in a week. The aim of this work is not to do away with the gang spirit, but to establish gathering places where the gang spirit may be led and directed. The rooms have been changed but little since they were barrooms. The bar is in evidence as before, and in the backroom are pool and billiard tables.

The boys' club at 321 East Seventy-first Street was, up to three weeks ago, the Little Bohemian Café and the scene of many disorders. Any night now seventy or more boys between the ages of 10 and 21 may be seen there playing pool, billiards, checkers, and other games, and boxing and wrestling. The recreational games and sports are under the direction of A. W. Hendrian, physical director.

E. F. Hanaburgh, organizer and director of all the clubs, said that money had been supplied for a great number of other meeting rooms, and that just as soon as other saloons are abandoned, for the unidentified philanthropist has stipulated that only barrooms shall be used, more new clubs would be organized throughout the district.

PROGRAM AWAITS HOOVER.

Food Regulations Dependent Upon Situation Developed in Europe.

Restrictions of the Food Administrations in July, August, September, October, and November of this year, resulted in a saving of 775,000 tons of sugar, according to a statement issued yesterday by the New York Federal Food Board. Inquiries as to the reasons for lifting restrictions upon the use of sugar brought the explanation that there was a large surplus of Western beet sugar and Louisiana cane sugar, and that the Cuban crop was almost ready for shipment. As long as th ewar was on it was necessary to save to send to the Allies, who had t odepend upon the same supply sources as the United States, but with the signing of the armistice this situation was immediately changed by the releasing of shipping, it was explained.

"Until Mr. Hoover's return the Food Administration will outline no definite scheme of saving on any particular commodity," it was said at the office of the Food Board yesterday. "A great deal will depend upon the supplies which are found available in Europe and the arrangements made with the Allied Food Council. But the people of America are urged to eliminate waste rigidly. This applies to all foodstuffs, including sugar."

Dr. Magnes Not Subpoenaed.

A representative of Dr. Judah L. Magnes said yesterday that, in spite of the statement of Deputy Attorney General Becker to the contrary, he had not been served with a Government subpoena and had not visited the Attorney General's office on Monday, for the reason that Dr. Magnes has been ill in a hospital since Dec. 1. It was admitted at Mr. Becker's office yesterday that Dr. Magnes had not been served with a subpoena, and that any statement to that effect was incorrect. A subpoena, it was said, had been issued, but when it was found that Dr. Magnes was ill in a hospital it was not served. Mr. Becker went to Washington last night.

Michael Reid.

Michael Reid, probably the oldest builder and contractor in New York City, who had charge of the construction of some of the principal buildings in the city, died yesterday at his home, 116 East Seventieth Street, at the age of 86 years.

Mr. Reid began as a builder and contractor at an early age and operated alone until about twenty years ago when he formed the M. Reid Company, Inc., with offices at 114 West Thirty-ninth Street, of which he was President at the time of his death. Among the buildings erected by Mr. Reid were the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, Imperial Hotel, Morgan addition to the Metropolitan Museum, and eleven Carnegie libraries.

Stocks Turn Strong and Active in Late Trading—Liberty Issues Up.

The lack of tangible factors to influence buying of stocks yesterday detracted nothing from the evidence supplied in late dealings that prices were bid upward with considerable vigor. The strength of stocks was emphasized by the upturn which occurred in some of the convertible bond issues and by the recovery recorded by the Liberty bond group. The second 4 per cent. Liberty bonds settled to a new low record early in the day, but turned about afterward and shared in the advance, which left most of the issues with net gains. The stock list dealt in showed a broadening out over the preceding day, and buyers appeared to find industrial and railroad shares equally attractive.

The character of the day's business in stocks indicated that professional traders were as potent a force in the market as they have been of late, and the quick appreciation of many quotations seemed to reflect short covering. The improvement began soon after the Steel Corporation's report on unfilled orders as of Nov. 30 was made public, showing a decline of 238,630 tons during the month. Comment heard in the Street was rather mixed as to the meaning of the figures, but the interest which sprang up in the steel stocks was interpreted as reflective of a favorable opinion of the tonnage statement in some market quarters, presumably among speculators who had previously thought that these shares were due to decline with the price situation hovering over the market in all its uncertainty. The decline of orders was less than had been expected by those who had looked for proof of large cancellations in the report. At the same time, there was no direct reason why a statement on forward bookings so soon after the signing of the armistice should cover any substantial amount of canceled contracts. With few exceptions the monthly reports for the last six months have showed reductions and have been difficult to size up in respect to their actual bearing on business, inasmuch as the Government has until recently been absorbing mort of the output of the corporation. It is doubtful if the figures for November denoted anything more than a continued inflow of Government orders for a fortnight or so after the armistice was signed, with cancellations making their effect felt in the closing days of the month. Of more positive information on steel conditions was the statement that the corporation's blast furnace operations during the last week had increased about 4.5 per cent. over the week before, while the ingot mills also showed an improvement.

The impression gathered from the statement made by E. H. Gary, speaking for the special committee of the American Iron and Steel Institute on Monday, was that producers desire to have the maximum price range lowered, without elimination entirely of Government supervision, at least for a time. The subject will be thrashed out in Washington today before the War Industries Board. Presumably, many of the steelmakers would like to have prices stabilized at a slightly lower than present level in order to see whether buyers would not then let their opinion of the market be felt. With the purpose in mind to continue wages on a high basis, it is probable that the producers hope to have prices change gradually, in a way to affect labor as little as possible during the early stages of the war-to-peace readjustment.

Call money turned easier, going as low as 5 per cent.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

New Ruble Currency.

The Allied Governments, including the United States, are working to stabilize exchange in Northern Russia through the issue of new ruble currency under the supervision of the provisional Government. The notes are to be issued on the basis of 40 rubles to £1, secured by sterling deposits in Archangel banks to the credit of the Bank of England. A cable message to Newman Brothers, exchange bankers, from a London representative yesterday said that the ratio of new notes to the pound sterling, 400 to £10, denoted approximately in relative values as they were found when the Allies sought to assist the new régime in the north of Russia. The normal, pre-war ratio was 95 rubles to £10.

Traders Change Ideas.

The strength of railroad equipment stocks yesterday and on Monday reflected a change of heart among numerous traders since Government cancellations received much prominence in market comment ten days ago. American Car and Foundry rose 2¼ points to the accompaniment of reports that the dividend would shortly be put upon a 10 per cent. basis.

Copper Sales Plan Soon.

The copper producers are expected to announce shortly the plan, under the Webb law, whereby they intend to handle their foreign sales. While the early discussion hinged on the formation of a new export corporation, the sponsors for the program have of late been working on a proposal to conduct the foregin business through a joint committee which would distribute sales among the several producing concerns.

One Way to Agree.

Still more of the members of the Railway Executives' Advisory Committee left New York yesterday afternoon to attend the meeting of the committee in Philadelphia at which the question of returning the railroads to modified private control will be discussed. It was said on good authority yesterday that the members would look themselves in and allow nothing to interfere with the consideration of the business in hand. The railroad world is not expecting that the final plan for the readjustment of the carriers will be developed, but it is generally conceded that when the committeemen adjourn their session they will be in a position to approach their definite plan for legislation without academic bickerings.

Shippers Want Relief.

Representatives of the American Exporters' and Importers' Association, the local Chamber of Commerce, and other civic and commercial organizations have gone to Washington to confer with Government representatives on the question of a steady supply of ocean tonnage to take away from the Port of New York the freight which is piling up in warehouses from day to day. It is the plan of the New York men to ask that the ban on import licenses be removed and that the Government provide bottoms at regular intervals in which freight may be removed from warehouses in New York and vicinity. More than 100,000 tons of east coast South American export freight is said to be waiting for shipment.

Wooden Ships?

In shipping circles yesterday word was received rather coldly from Washington that Senator Fletcher, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Commerce, had come out as a champion of wooden ships for ocean as well as coastwise service. The majority of exporters favor the steel vessel as it stands up under pressure while the wooden ships, especially when they are power-propelled, become severely racked in a comparatively short time when they are used at top speed. Others were inclined to agree with the Senator that the building of such ships should continue.

No Friction.

P. A. S. Franklin denied the report yesterday that he has resigned as a member of the New York Shipping Board as the result of friction which developed when the Government stopped the negotiations between the International Mercantile Marine Company and an English syndicate for the sale of the company's merchant fleet. In denying the report Mr. Franklin said that the emergency which caused him to offer his services to the Government is at an end and that he has resigned from the local board to devote himself to private duties.

URGED TO ORGANIZE FOR FOREIGN TRADE

HUGE 1918 TRADE BALANCE

$2,982,226,238 in Our Favor—Secretary Would Increase Force of Commercial Attachés.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Expansion of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce to enable it to give effective aid to American manufacturers and merchants in taking full advantage of after the war world trade opportunities is the chief recommendation of Secretary Redfield in his annual report made public today.

The Secretary also reiterates his approval of the proposed development of a Government-owned intracoastal waterway to link up the great cities of the East from the lakes to the coast and down the Atlantic seaboard.

Dealing with post-war trade and the part the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce can play, the report emphasizes especially the need for additional commercial attachés and trade commissioners.

The balance of trade in favor of the United States for the fiscal year 1918 was $2,982,226,238; the total of the merchandise export trade was $5,928,285,641, and the import trade was $2,946,509,403.

"Measured by the economic needs of the country and by the grave responsibilities of post-war competition," says the report, "the bureau should be expanded substantially in every branch of service.

"New attachés should be assigned to a number of important capitals, especially Athens, Rome, Madrid, Ottawa, Mexico City, and Santiago, Chile. We should also establish at the earliest possible moment resident trade commissioners in Sweden, Norway, Great Britain, France, Greece, Switzerland, Russia, Mexico, Bolivia, Uruguay, Brazil, Colombia, and Venezuela, Dutch East Indies, China, Philippine Islands, British India, Japan, Malay Peninsula, Egypt, South Africa, Australia, and New Zealand. The value of resident representatives is too obvious to require any argument for the extension of this feature of our service.

"The field for European investigations by special agents immediately upon the conclusion of the war will be so extensive that the bureau will require greatly increased funds. American concerns have a tremendous field for service to our allies in helping them rebuild and for future business.

"Too much emphasis cannot be placed on the desirability of employing trained economists, statisticians, and experts on banking, shipping, &c., in excess of the bureau's present force. These types of economic authority are constantly needed to conduct work equal in importance to that performed by the great Federal commissions in Washington.

"Our country is looking to the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce to do its share in preparing the country for economic security and prosperity after the war, when the chief industrial and commercial forces in both hemispheres will be ready to launch great organizations on the commercial seas in quest of trade. The instinct of commercial self-preservation demands organized action. This is not the time for short-sighted thrift. Other countries are looking ahead and spending money to organize for their commercial security. A wisely liberal preparation now will mean millions of income some day to this country, will mean industrial prosperity for our labor, and will mean strength for our economic structure against adverse conditions or sharper competition from any quarter."

On the inland waterways Secretary Redfield says:

"An important step forward, which will be of great advantage to our commerce, was taken when the Director General of Railroads assumed, on behalf of the Government, for the period of the war, the operation of the Cape Cod and the Delaware and Raritan Canals. Every economic, military, and naval argument points to the importance of the earliest possible development of a Government-owned waterway corresponding with what is commonly known as the Atlantic intracoastal waterway, connecting all the great cities of our Atlantic seaboard with one another, with the New York State waterways, reaching to the Great Lakes and Lake Champlain, and with all the railroad terminals along our Eastern coast."

Estimates for the expenses of the Department of Commerce for the fiscal year of 1920 aggregate $39,727,740. A large part of the increase over the current year of $21,571,675 is for the Bureau of the Census, to provide for taking the fourteenth decennial census.

B. R. T. SUES SERVICE BOARD

The attacks made by the Public Service Commission upon the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company for neglect of public duty were answered yesterday by the company when two of its subsidiary concerns, the New York Municipal Railway Corporation and the New York Consolidated Railway Company, joined in a suit against the commission to "compel specific performance of the city's obligations under the subway contract of March 19, 1913, with respect to the completion of rapid transit lines."

The commission is specifically charged with having failed to act promptly upon plans, drawings, &c., and in this way prevented the plaintiffs from observing their part of the contract in getting the lines in running condition. Because of these alleged acts on the part of the commission, the complaint recites, there remains to be finished 47 out of a total of 115 miles of track, and 19 out of a total of 41 miles of road, which the city agreed to construct and the plaintiffs agreed to equip and operate. The city should have completed its part of the work, it is alleged, by Jan. 1, 1917.

Public Service Commissioner Kracke, commenting on the suit, said that William L. Ransom, the commission's chief counsel, had been directed to prepare to meet the issue in court. He stated that in his belief the suit was only "a piece of camouflage to divert attention from the B. R. T.'s own derelictions."

Guantanamo Sugar Report.

The annual report of the Guantanamo Sugar Company for the year ended with September shows a surplus after depreciation and taxes of $540,872, which is equal to approximately $9.14 a share on the $3,000,000 capital stock of $50 parity. The previous report, covering a fifteen-month period ended with September, 1917, showed a surplus after depreciation—taxes were not mentioned—of $565,475, which was equal to $9.42 a share on the same stock. Sugar sales, after deducting sea freight and commissions, were $4,334,093 for the year, as compared with $3,354,453 in the fifteen months preceding. The company's balance sheet as of September indicates a decrease in cash from $618,536 a year ago to $69,362, while inventories increased from $374,606 to $1,100,426.

Reserve Bank Elections.

The local Federal Reserve Bank announced yesterday the result of the election of Directors by Group 3 of the member banks. Charles Smith, President of the Citizens' National Bank of Oneonta, N. Y., was elected a Class A Director to serve for a period of three years, and Leslie R. Palmer, a lawyer of Croton-on-the-Hudson, a Class B Director to serve for the same length of time.

GOADS MEXICAN CONGRESS.

Carranza Would Make His Oil Laws Automatic if Not Acted On.

The latest development in the plan of the Carranza Government to take over the oil fields of Mexico came to light yesterday when word was received here that a bill had been introduced in the Mexican Congress recently which provides that any bill presented to that body at the behest of the chief Executive shall, unless acted upon within a certain time, automatically become a law of the land. In oil trade circles here this measure is looked upon as another effort by Carranza to force action on the Petroleum Code which is now before the Mexican Congress. That body has been slow in its treatment of the proposed law and the danger of having his revenue measures held up, it is believed, has moved Carranza to a new plan of campaign.

The oil producers are determined to continue their operations without regard to any action which may be taken by the Mexican Government. If there is an effort to close down the oil fields or to confiscate them, the oil producers will, it is expected, appeal to their respective Governments. It is said the British Government is watching intently the trend of affairs in Mexico.

One of the highest officials in oil trade circles in this city said yesterday that the chief reason for Carranza's effort to appropriate the oil fields was to provide revenue for national expenses. Mexican finances are said to be far worse than is generally understood in the United States. One point which has aroused the ire of other countries than the United States is that there has been no payment of interest on Mexican securities since 1913, and one authority on the Mexican situation said that the tangle was comparable only to the state of affairs in Russia.

It was announced only a short time ago that there was interest due to the amount of 154,000,000 pesos, or about $77,000,000, on the securities of the National Railways of Mexico. Other debts have accumulated at a proportionate rate, it is said, and it is now predicted that the question of Mexico will be one of the important considerations which will come before the Peace Congress at Versailles. Mexican securities have been rather widely distributed abroad. Great Britain is the largest holder, France comes next and then Belgium, while there are also heavy holdings in this country. All of the foreign countries whose citizens have interests in Mexico, it is said, are preparing to make Mexico live up to its obligations.

RED CROSS ROLL CALL PLANS

Booths Being Set Up Throughout City—Fifth Avenue Block Party.

The Red Cross Christmas Roll Call is establishing 500 booths in the hotels, theatres, stores, and banks in Manhattan for the membership campaign next week. Red Cross buttons will be given ot those who sign up for the $1 membership and will serve, when worn, as a protection against further solicitation.

The Fifth Avenue block party which is to be held during the campaign has enlisted the support of all the city departments. The policemen and firemen have each asked for a block where they may bring their friends and families. Rear Admiral Usher has promised the Red Cross the use of all the naval bands in this vicinity. Members of the various nations of the Allies will be assigned blocks where folk dances and entertainments will be held.

High praise of the Red Cross was embodied in short statements of labor leaders made public by the Red Cross yesterday. They included E. I. Hannah of the Central Federated Union Union; Max S. Hayes of the International Typographical Union; William Greene of the United Mine Workers of America; John H. Walker, President of the Illinois State Federation of Labor; Margaret C. Daley, United Garment Workers; Frank Farrington, President Illinois Miners' Union; James W. Kline, General President International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths and Helpers; Daniel J. Tobin, American Federation of Labor; John P. White, United Mine Workers; James C. Shanessy, Journeymen Barbers; John L. Lewis, United Mine Workers, and Owen Miller, American Federation of Musicians.

Governor-elect Alfred L. Smith praised the Red Cross on Monday night at the first meeting he had with the Tammany Hall Executive Committee since the campaign.

AMERICAN SHIPS TOOK 46¼%

Gleaves Gives Troop Transport Figures to Correct Misstatements.

With the consent of the Navy Department, the New York office of Vice Admiral Gleaves, commander of the Cruiser and Transport Force, made public last night figures showing exactly the proportionate share of troops conveyed to France in American vessels. Of the entire army of 2,079,880 men taken over, the statistics show, 46¼ per cent. were carried in American ships, 48⅓ in British, and the rest in French and Italian vessels.

Of the total strength of the naval escort guarding all these convoys, the United States furnished 82¾ per cent., Great Britain 14⅛, and France 3⅛.

It was felt that these official figures should be made public owing to the discrepancies in the statements of many public speakers as to the relative share taken by the different naval forces enabling American troops to reach the battleline in sufficient force to turn the tide against Germany.

In actual numbers of men transported 912,082 were carried in American naval transports and 40,499 in other American ships; 1,006,987 were carried in British bottoms and 68,246 in British-leased Italian ships, and 52,066 by French and Italian ships. From May, 1917, to Nov. 11 last, there were 391 sailings of American naval transports, 123 of other American troopships, 546 of British ships, and 82 of other ships. Not a single soldier of those carried in United States naval transports was lost.

JEWISH CONGRESS TO MEET.

Will Assemble with 400 Delegates in Philadelphia on Sunday.

More than 400 delegates will convene in the American Jewish Congress in Philadelphia on Sunday, including 100 delegates from New York, headed by Nathan Straus, Chairman of the Executive Committee, and Adolph Lewisohn, the Treasurer.

According to an advance notice sent out by the officials of the congress, the meeting of the Peace Conference is the immediate occasion for calling the congress, and it will send a commission to Paris to set forth the claims of the Jews of the world. Their action, the statement says, will be based on the reports to be given of actual conditions among Jews in other countries after investigations under the direction of such Jewish leaders as Henry Morgenthau, Judge Julian Mack, Louis Marshall, and Bernard Semel.

To Test Market for Rail Bonds.

A syndicate headed by Kuhn, Loeb & Company will offer today a part of the issue of Chicago & Northwestern Railway Company 5 per cent. bonds, of which $165,000,000 have been authorized. The price at which the issue will be offered could not be ascertained but the financial district believes that this offering, which is the first substantial railway issue to be put out for some time, will show whether the market is ready for railroad securities of this character.

TAX BILL FIGHT OPENS IN SENATE

Simmons, in Urging Haste, Hints That There May Be No Extra Session of Congress.

WOULD MEAN YEAR'S DELAY

Minority Report of Penrose, Lodge, and Others Attacks Plan to Make 1920 Levy Now.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Debate on the $5,878,486,000 War Revenue bill, with its provision for a maximum levy of $4,000,000,000 for 1920, begun in the Senate today, when Senator Simmons, Chairman of the Finance Committee, explained its essential features. Mr. Simmons in urging action said that unless there was an extra session of Congress called there would be no opportunity of passing the bill until next December.

This was taken by the Republican Senators as a hint that President Wilson might not call an extra session of Congress next March. Any attempt to block an extra session will be resisted by the Republicans.

Senator Penrose, ranking Republican member of the Finance Committee, offered a dissenting report for the minority Republicans. It was signed by Senators Penrose, Lodge, McCumber, Smoot, Townsend, and Dillingham. The minority report took issue with the provisions in the bill for the $4,000,000,000 tax yield for 1920 on the ground that Congress could not undertake to say so far in advance what the requirements will be for that year. Senator Thomas of Colorado also put in a dissenting report, in which he urged that the alternative war profits tax feature be amended so as to make the tax pertain only to excess profits based upon pre-war profits. Senator Thomas maintained that to base a tax upon war profits would be an incongruity in time of peace.

"We had no system of internal taxation until the Mexican troubles arose and later the European war came on," said Senator Simmons. "The matter immediately was taken up and legislation enacted to bring in the proportionate share of funds required for unexpectedly heavy expenditures. Nobody could have foreseen what followed the entrance of the United States into the war. It became apparent at once that a great army must be raised and equipped. It made the adoption of an entirely new policy necessary.

"It is essential now to begin removing the unusual burden imposed by taxation. These should be reduced to the fullest possible extent. It is a great misfortune that the pending revenue bill was not passed at the last session. The legislation for 1920 becomes a requisite amendment because the proper work was not done in time. It would have been better for the taxpayer heretofore if he had known of increased taxation in advance. The rates virtually have been doubled. Previous knowledge would have been of great benefit to those who produce the revenue."

Senator Simmons insisted that the effort of the minority party in the Senate to prevent the inclusion of the 1920 yield in the bill would mean that many corporations enjoying a rich return next year would escape their fair share of taxation. He characterized it as a tendency to pander to the corporations.

"The minority insists that tax reductions be made at some later date," said Mr. Simmons. "Unless an extra session of Congress is called, this must go over until the first of next December. Producers of revenue during the interim will be unable to fix proper prices for their products. The principles of self-protection as well as selfishness will prevail. Unnecessary tax exactions will be made to meet unknown requirements. Producers will not take the risk. They will mark up their prices to conform to present rates and not to meet promised reductions. The producers will have $3,000,000,000 in their pockets, collected from the people, beyond what will meet the requirements of the Government. Neither the Government nor the people will get this money. These taxes will remain in the pockets of the great industrial taxpayers. They will go to increase the great profits they make.

"This situation is caused through the desire of one political party to perform the gracious task of making the reductions in taxation. This will cost the people $3,000,000,000, and the Government will derive no benefit from it."

The Minority Report.

In the minority report the Republicans say they are "generally in accord" with the provision for the $6,000,000,000 yield for 1919. But they do not agree with any stipulation for 1920. The minority report says:

"The fact that rapidly changing conditions, while the bill was under consideration in the Committee on Finance, enabled the committee to reduce the amount of taxes $2,000,000,000 from the original draft of the bill, furnishes a forcible illustration of the importance of legislating on the subject of taxation, so vital to the country, with the utmost care and in the light of ascertained conditions. It further forcibly demonstrates how unwise is the policy of haste and the anticipation of future needs at a time when radical changes in domestic and world conditions render today's conclusions perhaps worthless tomorrow."

BROADEN EXPORT PROJECT.

New Independent Company Charter Calls for Big Fleet.

A big fleet of ships, as an auxiliary of the Independent Steel Products Company, the recently formed export company of the independent steel producers of the country, is contemplated in the articles of incorporation which, it is expected, will be announced shortly. According to the head of one of the largest independent companies the scope of the new organization has broadened greatly since the inception of the plan several weeks ago, and he predicted yesterday that the new company and the United States Steel Products Company, between them, would control practically 100 per cent. of the foreign business of the steel trade of this country.

This member of the Organization Committee of the Independent Steel Products Company said that he looked for glowing results from the new organization. He scouted the idea that there was to be any cutthroat rivalry between the organization representing the independent producers and the selling organization of the United States Steel Corporation. On the other hand, he remarked that, while there would be friendly rivalry between the two, he was certain the organization to represent the independents was looked upon with favor by the United States Steel Corporation.

HOLD RUSSIAN DEPOSIT.

Bank Will Retain $1,000,000 Until Government Is Recognized.

Wall Street heard yesterday that $1,000,000 is on deposit in the National City Bank to the credit of the Russian Government and that it will remain on deposit until some Russian Government receives the full recognition of the United States Government.

The money was paid to the National City Bank, according to John P. Murray of Coudert Brothers, who acted as counsel for the Imperial Russian Government when suit was brought against the Tennessee Copper Company for the return of money advanced for the manufacture of trinitrotoluol, when the company agreed to make the payment.

The claims of the Imperial Russian Government aggregated $1,368,000 and the action was dropped when the company agreed to pay over $1,000,000. The National City Bank is still recognized as a depository for the Russian Government by the Federal authorities.

BILL TO CURB PACKERS.

Provides Federal Control of Rolling Stock and Storage Plants.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Representative Thetus W. Sims, Chairman of the House Committee on Interstate Commerce, introduced today a bill aimed to give the Government control of the rolling stock of the packing industry and of cold storage and freezing plants as a means of restoring competition in the packing industry. The measure goes much further than this, and provides for a radical step, such as licensing and controlling the meat-packing industry itself, if resistance is shown to the proposed plan of the Government to acquire and own the transportation facilities for marketing the product.

The bill appears, Mr. Sims said, with the approval of President Wilson, who, it was asserted, favored the legislation sought as the result of the investigation made by the Federal Trade Commission into the alleged monopoly enjoyed by the meat-packing industry.

"It is not proposed to take over any of the packing house plants," Mr. Sims explained. "The bill offers an alternative at the discretion of the President, either to actually acquire transportaion facilities and cold storage warehouses, or without acquiring them to place the meat-packing industry under a system of Federal license."

The bill carries an authorization for the creation of a revolving fund up to the amount of $500,000,000 to carry out the purposes of the legislation, and it is further provided that the activities may be allotted to one or more of the agencies of the Government for administration.

The Government is also authorized, if it shall be found necessary, to create one or more corporations for the administration of the legislations; the stock of such corporations to be owned wholly by the United States and the Directors being appointed by the President, by and with the consent of the Senate.

ASSAILS SHERMAN LAW.

Sabin Tells Chicago Manufacturers Act Ought to be Repealed.

CHICAGO, Dec. 10.—Charles H. Sabin, President of Guaranty Trust Company of New York, speaking before the convention of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association here this evening, urged the repeal of the Sherman law. He admitted that Government supervision may be necessary for some time to come and said that while such regulation and supervision may be advisable, the fact must not be lost sight of that the problem of war demobilization includes the "demobilization" of over-nationalization and over-regulation by Federal legislation.

Cochrane Estate Left in Trust.

RIVERHEAD, L. I., Dec. 10.—Yale University will eventually be a beneficiary of the will of the late Arthur De Witt Cochrane, a Summer resident of Greenpoint, which was filed here today.

He bequeathed all personal property, house furnishings, and automobiles to his widow, and the residue to Adam W. T. Cochrane of 30 Broad Street, Manhattan, a brother, to be held in trust, the income to be paid to the widow. When she dies $25,000 is to be turned over to the Trustees of Yale University to establish a fund, to be known as the John W. Cochrane fund, in honor of the testator's father. The income from the fund is to be used to benefit needy and deserving students in the academic department of the university and in Sheffield Scientific School. The residue, after the $25,000 has been paid, is to be divided equally between Adam W. T. Cochrane and Sarah Ann Freur of 43 West Fifty-first Street, Manhattan.

It has frequently happened that important business has been lost to a financial institution because its officers were apparently too busy to give proper consideration to the tentative plans of a prospective patron.
The officials of this Trust Company, acting on the assumption that the business of any one seeking information is always likely to be worth while, are willing to listen attentively to its presentation and to render an opinion in accordance with their experience of modern business practice in similar cases.
Perhaps the officers of this Company can serve you now.

COTTON TRADING LIGHT.

Traders Apparently Await Government Crop Figures Today.

Trading in cotton contracts was in light volume yesterday, despite the good opening advances shown over Monday's closing quotations, and which ranged from 7 to 35 points for all months. The hesitancy of the trade may, perhaps, be attributed to a disposition to wait the final figures of the cotton crop, to be announced by the Government some time today. The trade expectation, based on the light ginning results of the last four years, does not anticipate a crop of more than 11,100,000 bales.

The sentiment around the ring yesterday was based principally on the strong cables from Liverpool, which told of the partial relaxation there of the restrictions placed on short selling. The removal of this ban very probably accounted for the advances scored in futures in the Liverpool market, these months closing 14 to 49 points up from Monday's final prices. However, no substantial response to this good news was shown in the local market yesterday, aside from the opening gains. Buying by spot houses after the call caused prices to go to the high levels of the day, December selling at 28c, January, 26.74c; March, 25.50c, and May, 24.59c, but profit taking at this juncture caused prices to slip back to lower ground, or about 3 to 10 points below Monday's closing. The market closed steady, with the volume of trading light.

UNFILLED ORDERS DECLINE.

Steel Corporation Announces a Drop of 228,630 Tons in November.

The Steel Corporation's unfilled orders declined 228,630 tons during November, the total of forward business on the books on Nov. 30 being 8,124,663 tons. The decline, which was announced in the regular monthly statement yesterday, was expected in financial quarters and was not as large as had been looked for in view of recent reports of heavy cancellations of Government contracts.

The corporation at the end of September had bookings amounting to 8,297,905 tons; on Aug. 31, 8,759,042 tons; on July 31, 8,883,801 tons, and on Jan. 31 9,447,853 tons. The tonnage at the close of September was the smallest since Jan. 31, 1916, when 7,922,767 tons were reported. During the current month a more substantial result of cancellations is expected to appear, whose net effect on bookings will be governed by the extent of inflow of commercial orders.

Comment heard in the steel trade yesterday was to the effect that the annulment of Government contracts did not tend to depress the total of orders in market fashion until around Nov. 25. Prior to this date, it is understood, the receipt of new orders exceeded the outflow of finished goods. From now on the monthly statement will take on increasing importance as a trade barometer, inasmuch as commercial buying will replace the Government purchases which had dominated the order books for more than a year.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 10,303 packages. Very much quieter trading, a little more stock offering and a lower and unsettled market for most grades of creamery. Creamery, higher than extras, a lb., 69½@70c; extras, (92 score,) 69c; firsts, (88 to 91 score,) 63@68c; seconds, (83 to 87 score,) 58@62c; lower grades, 52@57c; unsalted, higher than extras, 71½@72c; extras, 70½@71c; firsts, 65@70c; seconds, 59@64c; State dairy tubs, finest, 67@68c; good to prime, 63@66c; common to fair, 52@62c; renovated, extras, 51½@52c; firsts, 48@50c; lower grades, 43@47c; imitation creamery, firsts, 47@48c; ladles, current make, firsts, 44@45c; seconds, 32½@43c; lower grades, 41@42c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 42@43c; No. 2, 41@41½c; lower grades, 37@40c.

EGGS.—7,207 cases, not including 1,500 cases for export. The market is irregular, advices as to shipments in transit are somewhat conflicting, present supplies are moderate, but the demand is quiet and selective, and in some stores the receipts are not clearing as closely as heretofore. On the sales reported prices show little change. Storage eggs are still wanted beyond the supply available, and many dealers are unable to obtain enough for urgent requirements. Prices are fixed by Food Administration regulations rather than by differences in quality or the normal relations of supply and demand. Some high cost Fall packings are held over our quotations. Nearby white eggs in light supply, but buyers have few needs, and the demand is selective. Stock that is at all mixed with stale or small eggs move very slowly at irregular prices. Some further sales of fancy Californias up to 92c, but most of the stock here is of less desirable quality and dragging heavily, with values uncertain and irregular. Fresh gathered, extras, a dozen, 73@75c; extra firsts, 73@74c; firsts, 71@72c; seconds, 66@70c; Fall gathered, poor to prime, 56@68c; dirties, No. 1, 50@52c; No. 2 and poorer, 46@49c; checks, good to choice, dry, 45@46c; under grades, 40@44c; refrigerator, 42½@55c; State, Pennsylvania and nearby Western hennery whites, fine to fancy, 94@95c; ordinary to prime, 75@93c; pullet whites, 70@75c; Pacific Coast whites, firsts to finest, 90@92c; lower grades, 84@86c; pullets, 68@75c; Western and Southern gathered whites, 70@85c; State, Pennsylvania and nearby hennery browns, 78@82c; gathered browns and mixed colors, 70@75c.

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Monday......6 " " " " "

Skirt Men Are Doing Well.

Judging from the reports of orders sent in by salesmen now out with Spring lines of separate skirts, buyers of these goods are by no means apprehensive of the future. While the question of prices is again a leading one, buyers for the most part are said to realize that there is little chance of reduction for the coming season, at least. The bulk of the business now being placed is on the better grades of silks, in which novelty plaids are said to be playing a large part, with fine wash skirts also being taken for later deliveries.

Labor Scarcity a Factor.

Although the War Industries Board has removed the restrictions regarding the allotment of gold to be used in the making of watch cases, many of the firms are still having much difficulty in filling orders owing to the shortage of labor. One manufacturer stated that the labor situation in this trade would be unsettled for some time to come, as many of the men who are now in the service and who have become accustomed to outdoor life would not care to resume their former positions in factories.

One Line That Is Short.

The revival in the demand for full-dress clothing, both for men and women, is said here to have brought to light a scarcity of dress gloves for both sexes. While it can hardly be said that there is a famine in them, the supply appears to be unevenly distributed and held at prices commensurate with the demand. The limited stock of the goods is said to be due not only to the lack of formal social affairs in the period that the country was at war, but also to the scarcity and high cost of the fine leathers from which dress gloves are made.

Gray Goods Buyers Mark Time.

Little change in the local gray goods market was apparent yesterday, buyers again being content to mark time for the present. First hands continued to show little interest in the proceedings, for, while they are willing in many cases to book contract business below the maximum levels established by the War Industries Board, they are not keen to do so at current prices for spot and nearby goods. Second hands, however, made sales for nearby shipment that included further lots of 38½-inch 64-60s at 12 cents, 38½-inch 60-48s at 10, and 39-inch 68-72s at 14½ cents. Not much was done in sheetings or special cloths.

Retailers Not Wholly to Blame.

Retailers were said yesterday not to be wholly to blame for the epidemic of canceling in practically all lines of business that followed the signing of the armistice. While this event was in many cases the peg on which the cancellations were hung, the canceling was done for other reasons than the hope of lower prices soon. In some instances this action was due to delayed deliveries, and this was especially true where ready-to-wear garments were concerned. The influenza epidemic was a larger factor than most people gave it credit for being, and many cancellations were due to overbuying on the part of retailers on representations by the manufacturers and jobbers that merchandise was scarcer than really was the case.

Crepes Again a Big Factor.

The crêpe family, especially Georgettes, again promises to be the leader in Spring dresses, with taffetas and foulards the runners-up. All of these fabrics have shown up well in the sales of early dresses, while in the wool goods serges, tricotines, and jerseys appear to have the call. Reports from various quarters of the trade make it appear that buyers are divided in opinion as to just how far they should commit themselves at this time, particularly so in view of the "safety first" spirit that pervades the offices of the merchandise men and the lateness of Easter in 1919.

Men's Wrist Watches Still Sell.

Shortly after the armistice was signed many of the retail jewelers, believing that the sale of men's wrist watches would be small, began to cancel orders. One of the large local stores which had placed an order for 2,000 of these watches, of which 1,000 had already been delivered, called up the manufacturer and asked that the remainder of the goods be withheld. It was added that other goods would be taken in place of those ordered. A few days later, however, the head of the department found that the watches were selling so well that he requested the manufacturer to send the rest of the goods as originally ordered. The demand for ladies' gold bracelet watches has continued to be very large, and some of the manufacturers are nearly oversold, owing to the shortage of movements.

New Patterns of Scarfs.

Table scarfs this season are selling very well to the holiday trade, and reorders are already being received from out-of-town department stores. Among the local stores the sales have been very good, and in the upholstery departments these goods are being featured exclusively. Many new patterns have been added to the lines, and, besides the usual run of square and oblong covers, several oval shapes are offered in various sizes. Tapestry and velour and combinations of both fabrics are among the best sellers. In the higher classed goods, tinseled brocades and Chinese embroidered scarfs are shown in many new designs.

Silver Articles for Presents.

There seems to be a difference of opinion among the manufacturers of silverware regarding the present condition of business. Some are of the opinion that business does not show many signs of improvement with the approach of the holiday season. One of the reasons given for this is the delay in the casualty lists, which is causing many people to hold off from purchasing Christmas articles until the last minute. Other firms state that since the first of this month there has been a very noticeable increase in business, especially in cigarette cases, which have been going very well.

Retailers Want Underwear.

The apathy that marks the primary end of the underwear market at the moment is not apparent among the jobbing trade. Not only are the latter still endeavoring to get goods owed them by the mills, but the retailers are duplicating for immediate delivery as a result of the recent cold weather. They are also placing business ahead for Spring, where they can, in spite of price uncertainties that exist at present. The question of price appears to be of less moment in the case of the goods wanted for immediate or nearby deliveries. A fair amount of duplication on seasonable weights of women's and children's underwear is also reported.

BUSINESS NOTES.

The firm name of L. Feldman & Co., New Orleans, has been changed to L. Feibelman & Co., Mr. Feldman having retired. The New York office of the firm is at 43 Leonard Street.

The office and showroom of the Cohen-Marks Company, manufacturer of undergarments for women, have been removed from 26 East Twenty-second Street to 1,183 Broadway.

PRAISES DE LAMAR GIFT.

Will Aid in Carrying Out Plans at Columbia, Says Dr. Butler.

Concerning the will of Captain Joseph Raphael De Lamar, who divided his residuary estate, valued at $10,000,000, equally among Harvard University, the Johns Hopkins Medical School, and the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler said yesterday:

"The magnificent bequest of Captain De Lamar will go a long way toward enabling us to carry out our plans to strengthen and develop the study of medicine and the care of the public health. It probably will be some little time before the bequest is received, and, meanwhile, we shall study how best to carry out Captain De Lamar's expressed wishes. It is a very magnificent bequest, and we are very grateful to his memory."

American Brake Shoe Dividend.

The American Brake Shoe and Foundry Company has declared a quarterly dividend of 3 per cent. on the preferred and 1¾ per cent. on the common stock, both payable Dec. 31 to stockholders of record on Dec. 20. This places the preferred stock on a 12 per cent. basis. The declaration was made for the quarter only because of a change in the company's fiscal year. Last year the company declared an extra 4 per cent. on the preferred stock, with a regular dividend of 8 per cent., payable in quarterly installments.

BANKERS OPPOSE FEDERAL OWNERSHIP

Investment Association Calls for Early Return of Railroads to Private Control.

NAMES COMMITTEE TO ACT

Members Hear That War Has Made American Investments Abroad Imperative.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Dec. 10.—At today's session of the annual convention of the National Investment Bankers' Association the following resolution, approved by the Board of Governors and introduced by John Fresley, Chairman of the Committee on Resolutions, was discussed at length and then unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the association put itself squarely on record at this time as opposed to public ownership of railroads or permanent public operation, and emphatically in favor of an early return to private ownership under such altered methods of regulation as will insure sound railroad credit and an adequate transportation system.

"Further, That a committee of the association be appointed and charged with the special duty of giving diligent attention to this phase of the railroad situation."

Speeches which followed the introduction of the resolution were limited to five minutes. Mr. Fresley, in presenting the resolution, declared that it was absolutely necessary for the association to declare its position. "By making the declaration at this time," he said, "the association will be in position to be of greater usefulness to our own members, and also to the country at large."

Explaining the reasons for the resolution the Chairman of the Committee on Railroad Securities, John E. Oldham of Boston, said the committee had studied the merits of public and private ownership and had failed to discover any reason to believe that more could be accomplished by Government ownership toward the development of the transportation industry than could be accomplished through private management under proper conditions.

George E. Roberts, assistant to the President of the National City Bank of New York, addressing the gathering, declared that the bankers of the United States must contemplate and prepare for the investment of American capital in foreign nations, if the export trade of the country is to expand.

"Exchange has gone to 50 cents on the American dollar in Madrid, and it is 100 per cent. in Italy, 7 per cent. in Argentina, and 2 per cent. in Canada," he said, "and these exchange premiums add to the price of goods in transit, and when the rate reaches a certain point trade slows and stops.

"America paid $500,000,000 to foreigners in interest and otherwise, and now it is about to collect, say, the same sum. I noticed that the War Industries Board of the Chamber of Commerce at its session here listed 470 commodities which were formerly imported, and it was planned to make them in this country. That would add to the balance of trade in our favor, and it could not be liquidated in gold. These balances must be left abroad for investment to strike the balance in settlement.

"England and Germany extended these credits, and through them built up their extensive foreign trade. We must capitalize our balances. We must create a foreign investment market. In addition, we must contemplate the balance which is expected from the reconstruction of devastated parts of Europe. It is anticipated that $500,000,000 will be due the United States from interest alone on the American loans abroad. It cannot be settled in gold. There is only $400,000,000 of new gold taken from the mines of the world outside of the United States every year. It is therefore evident that it would be a sheer impossibility to settle the balances in gold."

REAL ESTATE FIELD

An important deal in the Gansevoort Market section of Greenwich Village, forecasting a large commercial building operation in the near future, has been closed in the purchase of the property at the southeast corner of West and Horatio Streets by Albert C. Merkle from J. Seaver Page. The property includes 509 to 517 West Street and 114 to 118 Horatio Street, fronting 109.7 feet on the former and 125 feet on the latter street. Eight seven-story brick buildings and one two-story structure are on the site which were erected prior to 1839 by Z. Volney King & Brother for plaster mills and they have been used continuously for that purpose since that time.

Plans are being prepared by the new owner for the early erection of a fireproof business structure. Adjoining on the south is the American Seamen's Friend Society. Leon S. Altmayer and Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown Company, were the brokers in the deal. Mr. Merkle was represented by John J. Buckley as attorney. Title to the property was recorded yesterday, Mr. Merkle giving a $5,000 mortgage to Mr. Page, due June 10, 1920, at 5 per cent., and one of $45,000 to Elizabeth K. Dowling, due at the same time, at 6 per cent. There is a prior mortgage of $85,000.

Sulzberger Heirs Buy In Realty Offered at Auction.

A total of $455,000 was obtained for the Sulzberger property sold at auction in court partition proceedings yesterday by Joseph P. Day in the Vesey Street Salesroom. All of the forty properties offered were purchased in the names of interested parties and are to be turned over to a realty company now being formed by the various members of the family for the purpose of holding the realty.

Private Dwelling Buyers.

The estate of Jane E. Ahrens sold 62 West 119th Street, a three-story and basement dwelling on lot 17 by 100.11, held at $12,000, to the present tenant, Lillian Masserer. The seller recently acquired the house in exchange for the Stockton apartments on St. Nicholas Avenue. Nehring Brothers negotiated both transactions.

Investors Buying Tenements.

The Equitable Trust Company as successor to the Madison Trust Company sold to Elias Rosenbaum for investment 227 and 229 East Seventy-third Street, two five-story tenements, on a plot 50 by 102.2. The buyer intends to make extensive alterations to the property. E. N. Adler negotiated the sale.

The Charles Galewski Company resold to Della Trainor for investment 332 East Ninety-fifth Street, a six-story tenement, on a plot 45 by 100. C. J. Elgar negotiated the sale.

An investing client of Duff & Brown purchased from Joseph F. Park of Rye, N. Y., 333 East 113th Street, a five-story tenement, on a lot 25 by 100.

The Bronx Market.

Frederick Brown, operator, sold to the J. G. Lansing Company 969 Faile Street, a five-story tenement, on a plot 37 by 100, held at $60,000.

Joseph G. Abramson purchased through Byrne & Bowman 114 and 116 Nagle Avenue, adjoining the corner of Arden Street, a new-law five-story tenement, on a plot 40 by 105 by 130. The property has an annual income of $9,000, and was held at $55,000.

Joseph E. Frey sold to the Benenson Realty Company 1,076 Bryant Avenue, a five-story new-law tenement, on a plot 40 by 100, held at $47,500. Schwab & Co. negotiated the sale.

As a site for a warehouse the New York Building and Improvement Company purchased from the heirs of James Mulligan a plot 30 by 100 on the south side of 135th Street, just west of Third Avenue. This is the first transfer of the property in over fifty years. Samuel Goldsticker negotiated the sale.

Park Hill Apartments Traded.

An investing client of Fish & Marvin purchased from Frederick Brown, operator, the Park Hill apartments, two five-story modern structures, 100 by 150, at 242 to 246 South Broadway, Yonkers.

They were erected by the American Real Estate Company, acquired recently by Mr. Brown, and held at $150,000.

In part payment the buyer gave the Pomeroy property at Orienta Point, Mamaroneck, N. Y., consisting of a dwelling and about two acres of parked land held at $40,000.

$53,350 for Hone Westbury Estate.

The Hone estate on the Jericho Road at Westbury, L. I., was offered at voluntary auction last Saturday on the premises by Arthur C. Sheridan, and sold for $53,350 to Edward R. Greene of the law firm of Stetson, Jennings & Russell. He bought the property for one of the heirs of the Hone estate. It consists of a large residence and twenty acres with various outbuildings.

Queens Borough Sales.

G. Wachtel sold to J. Steiner a plot 46 by 100 on the south side of Covert Street, west of Cypress Hills Road, Jamaica.

J. Bishop sold to J. Mohrman a plot 80 by 90 on the north side of Syosset Street, west of Ferry Street, Woodhaven.

L. Vaughan purchased from A. Kelley a plot 60 by 100 at the northeast corner of Lamartine Avenue and Wright Street, Bayside.

Duveen Brothers, art dealers, are the buyers of the residence of the late Frederick Meade at 1 West Fifty-sixth Street, sold last week through Pease & Elliman.

The 50 East Sixth-first Street Company, T. Grassi, President, is the buyer of the dwelling at that address sold recently by H. C. Mathews through Douglas L. Elliman & Co.

Motor Car Lease.

Cross & Brown have leased to the Hudson Motor Car Company, 50,000 square feet of space at 622-632 West Fifty-seventh Street, comprising the ground floor and basement, for William W. Barnard.

Real Estate Notes.

A meeting of the Real Estate Owners' Protective Association has been called for Monday, Dec. 16, at the Hotel Majestic.

The Harlem Property Owners' Association has called a meeting for Thursday evening at 147 East 125th Street.

Plans have been filed for a two-story Post Office substation on the northeast corner of Lexington Avenue and 126th Street, a plot 60 by 99.11, owned by the Buckhart Realty Company. J. T. Dunn, the architect, places the cost at $30,000.

THOMAS D. McCARTHY, U. S. Marshal.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT, Southern District of New York.—At the suit of the United States demanding forfeiture thereof under the provisions of Sections 1, 2, and 3 of the Act of Congress approved February 19, 1909, as amended, I have seized and hold forty-six 1-oz. bottles cocaine hydrochloride, two ½-oz. bottles diacetyl morphine hydrochloride, and three bottles and one package containing 25,000 more or less 1/12 grain tablets heroin hydrochloride.

Notice is hereby given that the cause is appointed for trial at the U. S. Court and Post Office Building, Manhattan, New York, on December 16th, 1918, at the opening of court. All persons are notified then and there to appear and defend their interest, if any, in said goods. All not appearing will be defaulted.
Dated November 29, 1918.

U. S. MARSHAL'S NOTICES.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT, Southern District of New York.

Notice is hereby given that the Cornell Steamboat Company, owner of the steam tug "Primrose," has filed a petition for the limitation of its liability for any loss, damage or injury arising out of collision claimed to have occurred between the said steam tug "Primrose," the boat "Ontario & Western No. 21," and the barge "Bavier"; value of the vessel and freight, $8,500. All persons claiming damages because of such loss, destruction, damage or injury must prove their claims before Louis Bennett, Commissioner, at his office, Post Office Building, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on or before the 10th day of March, 1919, or be defaulted.
THOMAS D. McCARTHY,
U. S. Marshal, S. D., N. Y.

Notice is given that D. A. PAREIS, Sr., D. A. PAREIS, Jr., and ELLIOTT M. PAREIS, owners of the steam tug "Elliott," her engines, &c., have filed their petition for limitation of liability for any loss, destruction, damage, or injury from said steam tug on the 18th day of January, 1917. Stipulated value of vessel and freight $4,024. All persons claiming damages caused by such loss, destruction, damage, or injury must prove their claims before Alex. Gilchrist, Jr., Esq., Commissioner, at his office, Room 343, U. S. Court and P. O. Building, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on or before the 6th day of January, 1919, at 10:30 o'clock in the forenoon, or be defaulted.
THOMAS D. McCARTHY,

Education Notes.

The Professional Elementary Teachers' Association, Kindergarten 6B, will hold a meeting at 8 P. M. on Dec. 13 in the World Building. There will be open discussion of the salary question, as it affects the welfare of the schools.

The Board of Superintendents has recommended that, beginning on Feb. 1, a one-year unit course be authorized in each high school of the city, which offers a commercial course of study.

The Chairman of the Board of Superintendents has requested information from the Board of Education as to whether the disapproval of the nomination of Joseph K. Van Denburg for the principalship of the Morris High School, "without prejudice," constitutes a complete and final rejection of the recommendation of the Board of Superintendents.

The Board of Superintendents has recommended the redistricting of the city into forty-eight local school board districts, viz.: Manhattan, 16; Brooklyn, 16; the Bronx, 8; Queens, 6, and Richmond, 2.

Gilbert J. Raynor, who was appointed by the Board of Superintendents as Principal of the Commercial High School, Brooklyn, one of the most important high schools of the city, to succeed the late Dr. William Farley, was installed in office on Monday. Associate Superintendent Tildsley and Mr. Raynor made addresses. Up to the time of his appointment Mr. Raynor was Acting Principal of the school.

The New York Schoolmasters' Club will meet at the Aldine Club rooms, 200 Fifth Avenue, at 6 P. M., on Dec. 14.

Principal Leon W. Goldrich of P. S. 62, Manhattan, has resigned to accept the office of Executive Director of the Hebrew Sheltering Guardian Society at Pleasantville, N. Y., at $8,000 a year. His new work will begin on Jan. 1.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Pressure is moderately low tonight from Indiana northwestward to Manitoba and quite high to the northeastward and westward, the resulting precipitation during the last twenty-four hours covering the greater portion of the Lake region and the Northwest, the Ohio Valley, Tennessee, and portions of the Middle and South Atlantic and East Gulf States. Elsewhere the weather was generally fair.

It is considerably colder from New England to North Carolina, while to the southwestward high temperatures continue.

Snow or rain will fall Wednesday in the lake region and rain in the upper Ohio Valley and the Middle and South Atlantic States. There will be snow Wednesday night or Thursday in New England and probably scattered snows in the upper lake region.

In the lower Ohio Valley and the East Gulf States the weather will be generally fair Wednesday and Thursday, and on Thursday in the South and Middle Atlantic States, except Northern New York.

It will be slightly warmer Wednesday in the Middle Atlantic States and colder in the Ohio Valley, Tennessee, and the northern portions of the East Gulf States. It will be colder Thursday quite generally east of the Mississippi River, except in Northern New England.

Winds along the North Atlantic Coast Wednesday and Thursday will be moderate northeast, with fair weather; Middle Atlantic Coast, moderate to fresh east; probably rain Wednesday night or Thursday; South Atlantic Coast, gentle to moderate south, except moderate northeast off the Carolina and South Florida Coasts; cloudy probably occasional rains.

FORECASTS—TODAY AND THURSDAY.

Eastern New York—Rain or snow in the south, snow in the north portion Wednesday, somewhat warmer; Thursday, colder and cloudy, probably snow in the north portion.

Southern New England—Increasing cloudiness Wednesday, probably snow by night. Thursday, snow or rain.

Eastern Pennsylvania—Rain in the south, rain or snow in the north portion Wednesday, slightly warmer. Thursday, colder and generally fair.

Northern New England—Fair Wednesday, snow at night and Thursday.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at 11 P. M., taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

| | 1917. | 1918. | | 1917. | 1918. |

FALL IN A TAXICAB BEFORE A TRAIN

CAB WENT THROUGH FENCE

And Dropped Thirty Feet to the Tracks, on Which a Freight Train Was Passing.

While returning from Sheepshead Bay to Manhattan at 1 o'clock this morning a taxicab of the Black and White Company crashed through a fence at Avenue H and East Nineteenth Street, Brooklyn, and dropped thirty feet into the Long Island Railroad cut, falling in front of a freight train. There were four men, passengers, and the chauffeur in the taxi. One passenger was killed and the others were all injured seriously. The dead man was Richard Murray, 42 years old, described as "a manager," living at 577 West Forty-second Street in this city.

The injured now in the Kings County Hospital are Joseph McSherry, the chauffeur, of 26A Pearson Street, Long Island City; John O'Neill, 319 West Fifty-first Street; Charles Carroll, St. Paul's Hotel, Manhattan, and another whose name is not yet known to the police.

The driver of the taxi cab was unfamiliar with the Flatbush district of Brooklyn. The automobile course to Sheepshead Bay is down Ocean Avenue where there is a bridge across the railroad cut. There are other bridges at intervals, but at many streets there is an abrupt ending at the cut with a fence surmounting a stone parapet.

McSherry was coming down East Nineteenth Street toward Manhattan. His cab struck the fence, at the cut, crashed through and plunged thirty feet to the tracks. It fell just in front of a moving freight train which tossed it to one side a crumpled wreck. The gasoline tank broke and the gasoline caught fire.

A brakeman on the train ran back to the power house, two blocks away and notified the police and the Kings County and the Coney Island Hospitals. The Fire Department was also notified and a hook and ladder truck went to the cut and the ladder was used by the rescuers. The chauffeur was arrested pending an investigation.

WHITMAN LOSES APPEAL.

Nothing Can Now Hold Up Smith's Certificate of Election.

Governor-elect Alfred E. Smith won a decided victory yesterday over Governor Whitman when the Court of Appeals at Albany handed down two decisions, one dismissing the proceedings brought by the Governor's counsel for a recount of the void, blank, and protested ballots cast in Richmond County, and the other sustaining the ruling of Supreme Court Justice Philbin that the recount of the ballots cast in New York and Bronx Counties must be deferred until after a certificate of election has been issued to the Governor-elect.

The decision of the highest court in the State definitely ends all hope of the Governor that Mr. Smith's certificate of election would be withheld until the blank and void ballots cast in the city had been examined in court. Mr. Smith can now take his seat as Governor, no matter what action Governor Whitman begins.

The total number of soldier and sailor votes delivered to the Board of County Canvassers in the respective counties of the State was 27,337. Of this number Mr. Smith's friends estimate that he will get at least 70 per cent., or about 19,000 votes, as against 8,000 for Governor Whitman, or an estimated plurality of 11,000 for Mr. Smith. This, when added to the 8,000 plurality already received by Mr. Smith, will give him an approximate plurality in the State of about 20,000. Approximately 17,000 soldier and sailor votes were cast in New York City and 10,000 up State.

ORDERS LOYALTY INQUIRY.

House Committee to Investigate Security League's Charges.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Investigation of the National Security League and similar organizations and their charges pertaining to the loyalty of members of Congress made in the last political campaign was ordered today by the House without a record vote. Seven Representatives who were named by Speaker Clark will conduct the inquiry. They are: Johnson of Kentucky, Harrison of Mississippi, Saunders of Virginia, and Caraway of Arkansas, Democrats, and Brown of Wisconsin, Revis of Nebraska, and Walsh of Massachusetts.

Representative Towner declined to serve, explaining that his action was due to illness in his family.

"The league fixes the standard by which men are to stand or fall in this body," declared Chairman Pou of the Rules Committee, in calling up the resolution for debate. "If its hands are clean it need not fear an investigation, but if its purpose is sinister, it may be unwilling."

Mr. Pou said that the league spent more than $1,000,000 in the last campaign, according to its circulars, but that no campaign expense account had been filed as required by law.

URGES HOLDING COLONIES.

Melbourne Council Demands That Britain Retain Them.

MELBOURNE, Dec. 10.—The Legislative Council of New South Wales has adopted a resolution for transmission to the Secretary for the Colonies in London asking that the German colonies be permanently incorporated within the British Empire.

"For the safety of Australia, for the security of the British Empire, and the future peace of the world," reads the resolution, "every effort should be made at the Peace Conference to insure that in no circumstances shall the German possessions in the Pacific be returned to Germany, and that as far as possible consistent with a due regard to any equitable claim of other patients, these possessions should be permanently incorporated within the British Empire."

CARSE DISCUSSES CHARGES IN SUIT

McADOO SUPPORTS HIM

Brother of the Secretary Tells of Employment by Carse as a Consulting Engineer.

Henry R. Carse, President of the Submarine Boat Corporation and Treasurer of the Hanover Safe Deposit Company, a subsidiary of the Hanover National Bank, said yesterday that he was not worried by the suit brought by Elihu B. Frost and others to remove him and another trustee under a voting trust agreement made between Mr. Carse and four other stockholders of the Electric Boat Corporation and Antoinette F. Stout and Elihu B. Frost as executors of the estate of Calvin Frost.

In his complaint Mr. Frost alleged that Mr. Carse had mismanaged the affairs of the company; had refused to give details of the company's business to Frost; had paid "to one, Ross McAdoo, the sum of $40,000 in cash, with the intent and for the purpose that at least $25,000 thereof should be used in attempting to approach and influence a certain high official in the United States Government favorably to the bid of the company for a submarine contract, and that he (Carse) had caused to be paid to himself out of the treasury of the company $75,000 in addition to his salary of $60,000 annually as President, and $2,500 as a so-called Advisory Committee." When Mr. Carse was asked about the action brought by Mr. Frost he said:

"It doesn't seem to me that there is very much that I can say at present. We have not even been served yet with the summons and complaint in this alleged action. All we know about it is what we have read in the newspapers. I have always supposed that the place to try a lawsuit was in court and not in newspapers. Mr. Frost and those associated with him apparently have a different idea. This much, however, I may say: We found it expedient to get rid of Frost something like two years ago, and ever since then he has been threatening to bring some such suit as he is alleged to have brought. That is all I have to say at this time."

"What have you to say about Mr. Frost's allegation that you paid to yourself a bonus of $75,000 in addition to your annual salary as President of the Submarine Boat Corporation of $30,000 a year and in addition to the compensation of $2,500 a year as a sort of advisory counsel to the corporation?"

"Nothing improper in that or any other acts of mine that had to do with the management of the company and approved by the Board of Directors. Whatever was done is done every day and quite properly."

"What have you to say about Mr. Frost's statement that you paid to somebody named Ross McAdoo $40,000, $25,000 of which was to be used in attempting to approach and influence a certain high official in the United States Government?"

"Let Mr. McAdoo answer that question himself. He has issued a statement which has been published this afternoon and which, I think, fully covers the ground."

Then Mr. Carse produced a signed statement from Mr. McAdoo, who, it appears, is not 'Ross' McAdoo, but Malcom Ross McAdoo, a brother of William G. McAdoo, who recently resigned as Secretary of the Treasury and Director General of Railroads. Mr. McAdoo's statement follows:

"I have known Mr. Carse intimately both in a business and social way for the last fourteen years. When I first met him he was assistant cashier of the Hanover National Bank. He was Vice President of that bank when he resigned to accept the Presidency of the Submarine Boat Corporation. I have been retained by him, in my professional capacity, as a consulting engineer, personally and by him for various business interests with which he was connected on numerous occasions during this long period to advise him about matters which called me to many parts of the world.

"He never asked me to undertake for himself or others anything that was improper; in fact, I have never known a cleaner man in his business transactions. That he has disposed of funds of others in an improper way or with improper motives is, therefore, unbelievable by me."

The Submarine Boat Corporation was incorporated on Aug. 4, 1915, under the laws of the State of New York. Until 1917 it was a holding company, controlling the Electric Boat Company, the Electro-Dynamic Company, the New London Ship and Engine Company, and certain inactive subsidiaries.

On Sept. 14, 1917, the Submarine Boat Corporation obtained a contract from the Emergency Fleet Corporation to build fifty steel cargo-carrying ships, each of 5,000 tons dead weight. This contract was followed by another dated Nov. 16, 1917, which provided for the building of 100 of the same type of ships, all on a cost-plus basis. Mr. Carse said yesterday that the contracts, subsequent to their execution, increased the tonnage of the ships from 5,000 tons to 5,500 tons each. Mr. Carse added that forty-five keels had been laid and nineteen ships had been launched.

The company's yards are at Port Newark, N. J., where in 1917 the company leased sixty acres of ground for two years, with a yearly option of renewal for a period of fourteen years. Mr. Carse said yesterday that there was no likelihood of the Government canceling any of the contracts, since the ships were needed.

THE STORY OF REVILLON FURS

The Fur Market in Bokhara

ABOUT a million and a half Persian skins are exported each year from Bokhara to America and Europe. Of these only a small proportion have the flat, curly and silky texture so much desired for the finer furs. It takes years for the buyer to become acquainted with the native breeders and learn from which herds the finest skins may be obtained.

Platinum Jewelry Can Be on Your Gift List

There is no ban on platinum. The Government has removed it.
